GARDEN, FARM, BEES, ETC.

FOR THE ROCKERY.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Garden Correspondent says:—After spring gaiety of the rock garden, if room can now be found for sowing a few patches of the choicer hardy annuals, they will do much in livening up what is the rather dull and drab time for the rockery. Two tiny annuals eminently suited to the purpose, the little Violet-Cress, Ionopsidium acaule, and the blue Stonecrop, Sedum coeruleum, we have lately advocated, we think indispensable. Although merely annuals we find them self-sown, after being once introduced, going on for ever, and for this purpose we next commend the dainty little Portulaca grandiflora, a charming wee annual from Chili. A packet of seeds in mixed colours on the sunny side, for it is essentially a sun lover, although no novelty, we fancy it would prove a revelation to many. We would suggest an edging at the foot of the rockery for the Portulacas.

CONCRETE NOVELTY IN DUBLIN HOUSE BUILDING.

The above photograph illustrates portion of a scheme of 28 houses now in course of erection on St. Moibhi road, Glasnevin. The materials used are largely of local manufacture, being breeze blocks in hollow wall construction, made on the site, and Dolphin's Barn stock bricks. The facing bricks are multi-coloured concrete bricks made in Dublin. The work above the plinth is rendered with Blue Circle cement and sand, and finished with Snowcrete or Colourcrete to give a considerable variety of texture and colourings.

The plastering is of particular interest in that it is the first attempt in Dublin to make use on a large scale of the new finishes and materials that recent British research has developed, and great assistance has been rendered by the advisory architect (Mr. J. G. Wilson), of the British Portland Cement Manufacturing Association, in consultation with the builder and the general architect.

The roofs are of Beauvais and Beaucour tiles to obviate the monotony of one colour only in a long sequence of houses.

Internally the houses, consisting of three and four bedroom types, complete with garages, are finished in the best possible manner with all the latest aids to easy housekeeping.

Each main room is wired for power, and also piped for gas fires, in addition to the ordinary electric lighting services.

Important considerations for a purchaser are that the houses combine the greatest possible floor area, with a very compact plan, and the advantage of 20 years' remission of rates.

A further point is that the external paintwork is guaranteed by the makers for a period of five years, and internally for ten years.

The builder and owner of these houses, which are for sale only, is Mr. G. M. Linzell, L.I.O.B., Hollybank Works, Iona Crescent, Glasnevin.

The advisory architect is Mr. H. Greenwood, of 40 St. John's road, N.W., 11.

The plastering has been carried out by Mr. P. Comerford, of 39 O'Curry road, South Circular road.

The chief suppliers of materials were:—

Messrs. Brooks, Thomas and Co., Ltd., 4 Sackville place, Dublin—sashes, glazing and stairs.

Messrs. Thos. Dockrell, Sons, and Company (Ltd.), South Great George's street, Dublin—Sanitary goods.

Mr. H. Andrews, 17 Kildare street—Electrical wiring.

COTTAGE SOLD FOR £10.

One effect of the prolonged depression in the South Wales coalfield, coupled with the high rates, is a remarkable "slump" in the property market. Working-class cottages are changing hands almost at scrap prices. At a sale at Merthyr the other day a cottage producing a gross annual rental of £13 16s. 8d., and with 12 years' unexpired lease, was sold at £10. Prices accepted for other houses at the same sale ranged from £42 to £66.

"Bricks and mortar are not the profitable investment they used to be," said a well-known auctioneer. "With widespread unemployment, working-class tenants fall heavily in arrears of rent, and landlords, whether they draw revenue from the houses or not, are compelled to keep them in repair and pay rates in full. As a result bidding for such cottage property as comes into the market is practically negligible." The rates at Merthyr are 27s. in the pound.

641 MORE NEW HOUSES FOR DUBLIN.

The scheme is divided into two sections, viz.:—

(1) 343 houses, and
(2) 298 houses,

and contractors are invited to tender for one or both sections, in accordance with plans, specification and conditions of contract, prepared by the City Architect, and which can be inspected daily in his office, Exchange Buildings, Lord Edward street. Copies of bills of quantities and forms of tender can be obtained in the office of the City Treasurer, Exchange Buildings, Lord Edward street, on payment of five guineas, which will be refunded to contractors who submit bona fide tenders. Tenders are to be delivered at the Housing and Supplies Department, Exchange Buildings, Lord Edward street, Dublin, not later than Monday, 14th April.

TOKYO REBUILT.

Six new bridges spanning a river as wide as the Thames in London, 400 smaller bridges over the city's moats and inlets; 600 miles of new roads, three new parks, 51 open spaces, 875,000 acres of smoking waste again covered with houses, shops, and factories—those figures sum up the task which the citizens of Tokyo, aided by a paternal Government, have carried out in 6½ years.

4,000 TON BLOCK OF GRANITE.

The Presbrey Leland Company have notified the United States Geological Survey of the quarrying at their West Dumerston quarry of what is believed to be the largest single block of granite ever quarried in the world. It is pure white, and is in exceptionally good condition. Its estimated weight is about 4,000 tons, and it is 125ft. long, 35ft. wide, and 11ft. in average thickness. The Presbrey Leland officials said their block weighed five times more than the Assuan Obelisk in Egypt.

Central Heating
MEANS EVEN TEMPERATURE IN DOMESTIC AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

In winter, health and happiness depend upon the maintenance of a comfortable, equable warmth in the home. In the office or workshop adequate steady heat produces higher efficiency and a saving of time. Dangerous chills and serious maladies are due to sapped vitality and lowered resistance consequent upon low or varying temperatures.

NEW R.I.B.A. BUILDING.

The Council of the Royal Institute of British Architects has decided that the design of the new building for the R.I.B.A. shall be the subject of competition, open to all members of the R.I.B.A. and its Allied Societies (with the exception of the jury of assessors and the committee placed in the position of promoters and the members of their staffs). It has also been decided that the jury of assesors shall consist of five architect-members of the R.I.B.A., to be selected by the President and approved by the Council. With a view to assisting the President in his selection, members are invited to submit to the Secretary the names of members whom they consider suitable and qualified to serve on the jury.

Clonmel Mental Hospital Committee appointed Mr. T. P. Meade, county surveyor, as quantity surveyor for the new buildings the Committee previously decided on. There were applications from seven Dublin firms for the post.

An Order in Council made in December last requiring any container in which imported Portland cement is sold or exposed for sale to bear an indication of the country of origin, is now in operation in Britain. Although the tonnage of cement imported is decreasing, there is still a quantity placed on the market of foreign origin of which purchasers may be unaware. The cement trade is one in which the slogan, "Buy British," has particular aptitude. Decreased imports of cement mean an increased demand for British coal, since the manufacture of Portland cement represents one of the largest coal-consuming industries in this country.

"PHILOSOPHER" THOMPSON.

A CORK SOCIALIST.

FORERUNNER OF MARX.

(By T. F. HIGGINS.)

A HUNDRED years ago there lived near the town of Skibbereen a remarkable man named William Thompson, whose daring theories and peculiar habits—to say nothing of his harmless eccentricities—gained him great notoriety in this district. The country people considered him to be half magician, half lunatic, and even to this day stories are told in West Cork about the strange will and queer ways of "Philosopher" Thompson.

William Thompson, the son of a Cork merchant, was born about the year 1785. When quite a young man he happened to be present at a lecture delivered in Cork by a gentleman who descanted on the blessings which accrue to humanity from the inequality of wealth. Thompson expressed his disagreement with the lecturer's views, and it was this incident that caused him to devote himself to the study of political economy and social science. In later years he became a disciple of the famous Jeremy Bentham, who wrote to him in 1819, inviting Thompson to stay with him; and Thompson resided with Bentham for some years. It was here that he met John Stuart Mill, who refers to him in his "Autobiography" as "a very estimable man." He spent some time in France before the Revolution of 1830, and there he became imbued with the principles of the St. Simonians.

A CO-OPERATIVE COMMUNITY.

About 1815 he bought a small estate between Skibbereen and Rosscarbery; for, in the year 1827, he tells us that for about twelve years he had been "living on what is called rent, the produce of the labour of others." It was here that he proposed to put into practice the principles laid down in his writings. In September, 1831, he announced the formation of a co-operative community to consist of 2,000 individuals, possessing £6,000 capital. The Rahaline community scheme in County Clare, which was subsequently lost in the dice-box, had been in successful operation for some time. The West Cork community was to be established on the principles of mutual co-operation, united possession and equality of exertions and the means of enjoyment. Every person was to have an interest and share in the general property of the community, while he contributed by his personal exertions to the welfare of all, exchanging, when he wished, the products of his own industry for articles belonging to other members. Thompson had laid the foundations for buildings to house the community, but death cut short his speculations. He died of inflammation of the lungs on March 28th, 1833.

As a disciple of Bentham, Thompson followed his example and willed that his body should be dissected and the skeleton mounted for scientific purposes. This was done. A French phrenologist, named Baume, came across from London and claimed the cranium in order to lecture on its physical development. For the last twenty years of his life Thompson was a strict vegetarian and abstained from all stimulants. This abstinence, he stated, was induced by a careful consideration of his own bodily requirements, and enabled him all the better to pursue his mental and literary labours.

HAPPINESS RATHER THAN WEALTH.

When alive, Thompson delayed too long in making his great experiment, and, when dead, the law frustrated his intentions. The philosopher bequeathed his estate to found a Socialist community, but his testamentary dispositions were challenged. The rules laid down by him for the conduct of the community were held to be "immoral," and the will was upset.

Political economists of the early nineteenth century held, as Mr. Senior puts it, that "it is not with happiness, but with wealth, that I am concerned as a political economist." On the contrary, Thompson's idea was to inquire into the principles of wealth most conducive to happiness. He expounds this theory in his chief work, called "An Inquiry into the Principles of the Distribution of Wealth," published in 1824, which fell still-born from the Press. It was republished in 1850 and in 1869.

Following on Bentham's lines, his object was to apply to social science the ascertained truths of political economy. Thompson's theory was that the system of mutual co-operation is the only one yet proposed which admits, as one of its fundamental bases, the equal improvement of the physical, intellectual and social faculties of men and women. Nevertheless, he is as cautious in his proposals for reform as he is searching in his criticism of existing social conditions. He strongly advocates communistic organisation as against individual economy, and he regards competition as the root of all evil.

INFLUENCE ON KARL MARX.

In every Socialist system, which carries out logically the right to the whole produce of labour, the goods allotted to the individual must be in proportion to the work performed by him—at any rate, as regards those capable of labour. In Thompson's view, however, distribution must be according to needs, corresponding to rights of subsistence. All members of the socialistic communities are to be fed, clad and housed out of the general store, the children being educated in common. He tries to reconcile this contradiction by his proposal that, while in Socialist communities goods are to be equally distributed, according to individual requirements, on the other hand every member "who can labour would be forced to perform the same amount of work, measured by the time devoted to it."

Owing to the completeness of his exposition—he was a solid, but far from lively, writer—and the wide influence of his works, he may be regarded as the founder of scientific Socialism. Socialist writers of a later day have drawn their opinions directly from his books. Karl Marx is noticeably influenced by Thompson, and the whole theory of "surplus value" which he enunciates is borrowed in all its essentials from Thompson's writings.

William Thompson was, as Professor Ingram styled him, "a man of singularly pure, unselfish and public-spirited character, and an earnest student of moral, social and political science." His claim to fame rests chiefly on the fact that he was the first writer to elevate the question of the just distribution of wealth to the important position which it now occupies in the domain of political economy.

MR. KAYE DON

SPECIAL TELEGRAM.

DAYTONA BEACH, Wednesday.

After he had telephoned reports to Mr. Louis Coatelen in New York on the condition of the beach here, Mr. Kaye Don said that he would remain here until the course had improved sufficiently for him to "take a final shot at the 'record.'"

Meanwhile the authorities are investigating the fire which occurred during the early hours of this morning on the speedway. Fortunately, the timing tower and instruments were saved. It is believed the fire was the work of incendiaries. Luckily the Silver Bullet is kept at a garage some distance from the speedway, otherwise it might have been damaged beyond repair.

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY.

As Others See Us.

As Others See Us.

The extreme tedium of yesterday's non-stop debate in Dáil Eireann was relieved for me by one bright spot which was provided by Deputy Esmonde. Mr. Esmonde showed me a copy of the Paris Temps, generally the best informed newspaper in France, which contained the following delicious tit-bit of news: "The Free State Government was defeated in Dáil Eireann by two votes on the occasion of a proposal to grant old age pensions to members of the House." Thus history is made. Possibly, however, the writer in the Temps is only anticipating events. At yesterday's rate of progress in the Dáil, most of the deputies will have qualified for old age pensions before any real business is done again.

"Howlers."

An old friend of mine, who teaches school in the country, mentioned, in a recent letter, some laughable "howlers" which were made by one of his pupils. The "Oireachtas" was described as "the place which used to be Leinster House, but can no longer be so regarded." A question as to the meaning of the word "quota" presented no difficulty to the youth; for his answer came very promptly—"The thing you have to do before you can get away to America." The gem of all was his answer to the question, "What would you suggest as an explanation of the River Liffey's lengthy detour?" which ran as follows: "Probably, since it rises in the Caterpillar Mountains in Co. Wicklow, it was cursed by well-known local spirits, and followed a winding course like the caterpillar."

The Burning of Grangecon.

The burning of Grangecon last week, due, I believe, to an overturned oilstove, must have been a sore blow not only to the inmates, but to The O'Mahony of Kerry as well. Grangecon had been bequeathed to him by his uncle, the late David Mahony, one of the best-known landed residents in Kildare County, and for a long time a most popular Master of the Kildare Hounds. Grangecon was rather a wonderful place, having no less than thirty-three bedrooms, and a great amount of treasure-trove, pictures, and antiques. For some years now it has been occupied by the Member for East Wicklow, The O'Mahony's only surviving son, who has a wife and two daughters.

THE O'MAHONY.

The O'Mahony of Kerry.

Pierce O'Mahony of Kerry, now in the 'eighties, has had a stirring and eventful career. His eldest son and heir was killed whilst duck-shooting on the lake at Grangecon soon after his marriage. An even greater tragedy was the shooting of O'Mahony's beloved half-brother, the late Sir Arthur Vicars, during "the trouble." This occurred at Kilmorna Castle, Co. Kerry, where the former Ulster King-of-Arms resided with his wife and servants. Here again there was a tremendous loss of valuable property, priceless pictures and heirlooms, belonging to O'Mahony's sister, Madame de Viani, who had married a Polish count. The property here was all looted or burned; but I understand that at Grangecon many of the more valuable pictures have been saved.

Countess Catherine

I should add to my list of celebrated Irish centenarians one who outshone, as she outlived, all the rest—Catherine, Countess of Desmond. She danced with the Duke of Gloucester, afterwards Richard III., and, in the girlish excitement of being so honoured, actually found him handsome. After years of vicissitudes in the quagmire of Tudor politics in Ireland, she appears with her third set of natural teeth in her one hundred and fortieth year, suing for her rights at the Court of James I. Her residence at that period was at Inchiquin, and Colonel Herbert, who records her sensational appearance in London, writes that she had announced her "intent to return thither incontinently," adding the words, "Laus Deo," but whether on account of the wonder of her years, or, ungallantly, because the Court would soon be rid of her, does not transpire. She was one hundred and sixty-two when she died, and, even so, the chronicler reports that she might have lived longer had she not met with a violent sort of death. "She must needs climb a nutt-tree to gather nutts; soe, falling down, she hurt her thigh, which brought on fever, and that brought death." Poets later wrote that it was cherries from a tree that Raleigh had planted that caused her downfall, and one more ribald, after explaining that she had far passed a hundred and ten, concludes by writing that "she was killed by a fall from a cherry tree then. What a friskey old girl!"

Home Dyeing.

In a little shop in a Co. Mayo fishing village there were large air-tight tins on an upper shelf; tins that had come from a certain town in England, and were labelled "Scarlet" and "Magenta."

Among their other purchases the women of the district often included some of the contents of these tins, and mixed the two shades for the dyeing of the home-spun flannel, from which they make the famous petticoats that show up so vividly and picturesquely on the bog, or at the haymaking in the small windswept fields. To the average home-dyer it is nothing short of a marvel that this western dyeing should be so unfailingly successful, and that the shade that results from the mixing of these two colours should be a uniform one that scarcely ever varies in the slightest degree.

Amateurs know all too well the risks and uncertainties that attend such a process when attempted at home; the streaks and the uneven patches, or the totally unexpected colour that may be acquired by the garment, because of something done or left undone, that would have made all the difference. In that village every red petticoat was of the same rich shade of scarlet, with the merest suspicion of magenta, and, apparently, there was never a failure.

The only explanation one ever succeeded in getting from those women—if it could be called an explanation—was this: "The magent can do a lot."

A Sea Story.

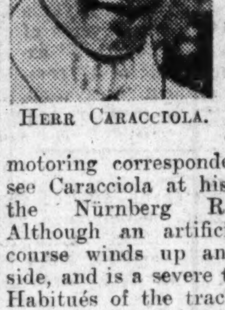
A correspondent writes:—I happened recently to come across a file of the Cork Medley (1738), and while turning over its pages I alighted on a sea yarn which deserves to be rescued from obscurity. Their Kinsale correspondent writes on June 4th, 1738—"Some time ago Capt. John Madox, Commander of the Charming Sally, of Bristol, on his passage home from Guinea and Jamaica, about 300 leagues westward of Ireland, unfortunately struck against a grampus of prodigious size, which was, as supposed, sleeping. The ship gave a terrible bounce, surprised all hands, and overset chests, etc., in the cabin and between decks. As it was by day they plainly saw the fish, and believe the ship's keel when she ran over it cut in a very terrible manner, the sea being all stained with his blood. The ship immediately complained, and on finding her to make water, to prevent her foundering, they stuffed in pieces of beef and pork between the planks, and so by continual pumping kept her above the water for five days, when they happily espied a sail. The captain had just time to bring off his gold and gold dust and some provisions till their arrival in Cork."

Her Good Deed.

In spite of the efforts of the Cleansing Department to keep the Dublin streets clean, even quite early in the morning the streets are still littered with papers, discarded tram tickets, etc. True, there are receptacles for rubbish attached to lamp posts; but they are apparently ignored. However, there are exceptions to every rule, and yesterday morning I noticed a business girl stepping to one of the wire receptacles and carefully depositing therein her tram ticket.

Caracciola for Dublin.

That Herr R. Caracciola has entered is one of the most interesting items of news which we have yet had in connection with the Irish International Grand Prix car races. Caracciola, who won the Ulster Tourist Trophy Race in August last, is one of the younger generation of drivers, his age being under thirty years. He is one of the most skilful drivers in the world, and is now the "star" racing man in the Mercédès-Benz camp. It was fascinating to watch him perform in the Co. Down race, but a motoring correspondent tells me that to see Caracciola at his best one must visit the Nürnberg Ring in Germany. Although an artificial track, the Ring course winds up and down a mountain side, and is a severe test of driving ability. Habitués of the track consider Caracciola the greatest of Germany's drivers.



HERR CARACCIOLA.

The Useful Duty.

A correspondent tells me that a few days ago she purchased a clothes basket which was somewhat similar to one she bought in the same shop some years ago. The price, however, was about 40 per cent. dearer. When she commented on this the retailer remarked: "Oh, it's the duty, ma'am." "But," she reminded him, "you have just assured me that this basket was made in the Free State." "Well, you see," he replied, "since the duty was put on the English baskets the price of the home-made article has gone up." The "duty" excuse is, I am afraid, a very useful form of protection for "profiteering."

Penny Dinners.

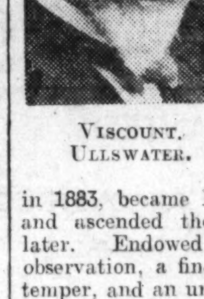
I see that a very commendable move has been made in the Newbridge district under the capable management of Lady Greer, assisted by Mrs. Henry. This is a system whereby "Penny Dinners" are supplied on weekdays to about 200 people in the locality. The dinners are certainly more substantial than the price suggests, and the difference in the cost of the meals and the charge made is subsidised by voluntary contributions from persons interested in the movement. This work is, I understand, in vogue in other towns, but, so far as Newbridge is concerned, it is only an innovation of November last. Though only in its infancy, the organisation has proved itself an unqualified success.

A Manx Centenary.

I understand that arrangements have been made for a big demonstration in Douglas, Isle of Man, on the 5th of May, when Manxmen will assemble to do honour to the memory of their national poet, T. E. Brown (1830-1897), on the 100th anniversary of his birth. Brown was born in Douglas and educated at Oxford, where he became a Fellow of Oriel. He was headmaster of Clifton College from 1863 to 1892, when he retired and spent the remainder of his life in his native island. He had more of poetic temperament than poetic expression, and his work is somewhat rugged in form, though several of his lyrics are admirable and find a place in most anthologies. Brown's poems were collected in one volume in 1900, and his Letters, published in the same year, are filled with native humour and a deep love of the natural beauties of his island.

Viscount Ullswater.

A notable April birthday is that of Viscount Ullswater, still best remembered as Mr. Speaker Lowther, who presided over the House of Commons from 1905 till 1921—a period as critical, politically and nationally, as any in the history of the Mother of Parliaments. Essentially a Parliament man, not only by inclination, but by heredity—since his family has had an unbroken association with the House for over two centuries—he was born in 1855, and, after being called to the Bar, entered political life as M.P. for Rutland in 1883, became Deputy-Speaker in 1895, and ascended the Chair just ten years later. Endowed with acute powers of observation, a fine tact, an imperturbable temper, and an unfailing sense of humour, it was truly said of him that even in times of greatest stress he could rule the Commons with "the twinkle of an eye."



VISCOUNT ULLSWATER.

Spectacular Hockey.

After watching the final game of the International Championship at Crumlin last Saturday I found myself reconsidering my recent statement that hockey was lacking in excitement for the uninitiated spectator. The crowd at the match may have been small; but it was as enthusiastic, as loud-voiced and as good-humoured as any I can remember anywhere. Several people who have never seen a game of hockey before tell me that they went "prepared to scoff" but remained to shout themselves hoarse with excitement. Perhaps, there was more robust play than one expects in an international game, but it was played at a terrific pace and the finish was the most thrilling I have ever seen. I sat next to Dr. "Jimmy" McCausland, the President of the I.H.U., and not for some days to come shall I forget the grip of his fingers upon my knee during the closing minutes of the game, while, with his free hand, he helped himself to cigarette after cigarette from my shaking case, mangled them between his fingers, and threw them away unlit. I left the ground with Mr. C. S. Waugh, Honorary Secretary to the I.H.U., who tells me that enormous "gates" are frequent at hockey matches in Germany, where the game is most popular with spectators.

Mitchelstown Caves.

Lying in the valley separating the Galtee and Knockmealdown Mountains are two rounded hills rising to a height of about one hundred feet. Within these are the Mitchelstown Caves. One of these was not discovered until 1839, but the other has been known from time immemorial. The chief beauty of these caves is the wonderful collection of stalactites; these take various shapes, the most peculiar being the Drum and the Pyramid. The base of the Drum is composed of stalks, cemented together with foliated edges, some of which are very thin, and, when tapped, vibrate with a drumming noise. The Pyramid is of perfect shape and rises to a height of fourteen feet from an enormous base. Other pecularities are named Lot's Wife, the Table, etc.

LORETO CONVENT, BRAY.

There was a large attendance at Loreto Convent, Bray, on Tuesday evening, when an entertaining programme was presented by the pupils. A feature of the evening was the physical drill displays, which were executed with skill and precision. The pupils were loudly applauded for the enjoyable programme which they provided, and also for the manner in which the several items were presented. Medals, awarded by the Physical Culture Society to the best all-round pupils, were won by the following:—Senior division, Miss Marie McGee; junior division, Miss Kathleen Doyle. Medals were also awarded to the following:—Miss Nancy Larkin, Miss Maureen Kelly, Miss Margaret Ward, Miss Nora McCaffrey, Miss Aileen Magee and Miss Elizabeth Dempsey.

ADJUDICATOR ON DEARTH OF CHOIRS.

BUSY DAY AT PORTADOWN MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

PORTADOWN, Wednesday.

This was the busiest day, so far, at the Portadown musical festival. The large and minor rooms of the Town Hall were occupied during the day. Dr. Bairstow and Mr. C. K. Scott were the adjudicators. The entries were fairly satisfactory, and again the competitions were followed with keen interest by large audiences.

The senior piano solo for the John Young Memorial Challenge Cup, was a competition of outstanding interest. The cup was retained by the holder, Mr. W. R. Anderson, of Portadown, whose future is full of promise. Miss Kathleen McCleery, Belfast, was a very good runner-up—her marks being just two below that of the winner.

A very enjoyable competition in the afternoon was the duet playing, for which there were four entrants. It was a very creditable performance, and was much enjoyed.

THE AWARDS.

Senior Pianoforte Solo (for competitors 17 years of age and over)—First prize, "The John Young Memorial Challenge Cup," presented by Mrs. Young; second prize, silver medal.

Test pieces: (a) Fantasia and Fugue in C (K 394) (Mozart); (b) competitor's own selection; (c) sight test.

2—Miss Kathleen McCleery, Belfast (187 marks).

Six competed.

Dr. E. C. Bairstow, who adjudicated, said that the winner played a long way from his work. The elbows were six inches above the keys instead of one inch below. He had a neat, safe habit with his fingers; but the hands and arms were wooden. The piece was taken at a hot pace; but it was successfully negotiated. The fugue opened well—he had something to tell them: The augmentation came out well, that was undoubtedly the best thought out idea of the fugue. Single notes at the end sounded anti-climax, and the adagio petered out. His Beethoven Sonata was played con amore, and the difficult broken chords were very well done. The sight-reading was slow, but firm and fairly accurate. The ornaments were well done.

TOO REFLECTIVE.

As regards the second prize winner, Dr. Bairstow said that the opening portion was rather tame, and she made rather purposeless use of the pedal. The quieter passages were gracefully played, and accuracy was a strong feature. She wanted a bigger sense of climax. Why put the pedal half-way down nearly all the time? It slightly clouded everything, even in the fugue. She was too reflective, and would not let them know what she really felt. Her playing was very accurate and pleasant in tone. In the second piece the playing was poetic and the pedalling was better. In the sight test many of the ornaments were left out. She did not grasp the piece—its style and rhythm.

Pianoforte Solo (for competitors over fourteen and under seventeen years)—Tests: "Danse Negre," Op. 58, No. 5 (Cyril Scott); competitor's choice and sight test.

1—Miss N. Davidson, Castlecaulfield (191 marks).

3—Miss E. Burnett, Portadown (180).

VERY MUSICAL.

Dr. Bairstow said that the first prize winner's playing was very musical. The second prize winner had not much sense of climax, but her playing was pretty accurate.

Pianoforte Solo (for competitors over eleven and under fourteen years), confined to a radius of twelve miles—First prize, silver medal, presented by Mr. N. Anderson; second prize, bronze medal. Test pieces: (a) "Courante," from French Suite in E major (No. 6) (Bach); (b) sight test.

1—Alice Tarleton, Armagh (181 marks).

2—Gretta Hewitt, Portadown (178 marks).

3—Irene McDonnell, Portadown (172 marks).

Mr. C. K. Scott, the adjudicator, said that several of the children were very good, and played that difficult little piece of Bach in quite an advanced, clean way. The winner's sight-reading was perfect. Generally speaking, all the children were quite musical, and the first two had really produced something which was quite worth having. All were very promising. The third played the piece very nicely, and her sight-reading was distinctly good.

Pianoforte Solo, for competitors under 11 years.—Silver medal, presented by Miss M. C. G. Spence. Test pieces: (a) "First Loss" (Schumann); (b) "Knight Rupert" (Schumann); and (c) sight test.

1—Helen J. North, Armagh (183 marks).

GOOD SIGHT-READING.

Mr. C. K. Scott, adjudicator, said that the sight-reading all round was good, and the winner played her first piece very well.

Pianoforte Duet.—First prize, a gold medal to each member of the duet, presented by W. Moffat Clow and John Gibson. Test pieces: (a) Hexentanz, Op. 17, No. 2 (McDowell); (b) Hungarian Dance in D Flat, No. 6, Book 2 (Brahms).

1—Miss B. Patton and Miss Nellie Davidson, Castlecaulfield (177 marks).

2—Mrs. E. M. Rodgers and Mrs. M. Thompson, Belfast (175 marks).

TECHNICAL RESOURCE.

Mr. Scott said that the winners were very good in tempo; there was clear fingering, and the work done had great variety, brilliant musical feeling, and technical resource. The second prize winners did not play quite as quick as was necessary; but still it had movement. The second piece was played well, but a little too precise. They were a distinctly good pair of players.

INTERPRETATION.

1, H. McCaghey, Belfast (171 marks).

2, O. L. Walshe, Omagh (169 marks).

Dr. Bairstow said that the singing of the first prize-winner was sincere and convincing. He told the story well, but as one detached from emotion. He sang the two songs very well. Number 2 had plenty of imagination and a nice voice, and knew what it was all about.

Ladies' Trio.—Test—"The Nightingale, the Organ of Delight" (Thos. Weelkes).

1, South Down Trio, Warrenpoint (87 marks).

2, St. Anne's Trio, Belfast (86 marks).

Dr. Bairstow said that the blend and balance of the first prize-winners were better than those of the others.

Folk Song.—Competitors' choice.

1, O. L. Walshe, Omagh (92 marks), winner silver challenge cup; 2, Miss R. George, Belfast (88 marks).

"This absolutely came off," said Dr. Bairstow, referring to the first prize-winner. He did really sound like some old person singing a folk song as it ought to have been done. The singing of the second prize-winner had rhythm and contrast.

ADMIRABLE SINGING.

Mixed vocal quartette. Tests: "Tender and pure" (Brahms) and "God is a Spirit" (Sterndale Bennett). The Major Mixed Quartet Belfast, was the only entry.

Mr. Scott, who, with Dr. Bairstow, adjudicated, said that the singing was most admirable. It was the very basis of ensemble work and a great test of vocal capacity. They started with a burst and had little feeling for each other. The blend was not very good, and the tone generally was rather superficial. The second piece showed better unity of purpose and purity of utterance. It was a reverent interpretation and not aggressive. He awarded 154 marks.

Tenors (Johnston Memorial Cup). Test pieces: "Now sleeps the crimson petal" (Quilter) and competitor's selection.—1, Adam Donaghy, Belfast—174 marks; 2, D. G. Wilson, Belfast—173 marks.

Dr. Bairstow said that there was not a bad voice amongst the lot. Their greatest fault was the way they uttered their words, forgetting that they make themselves understood not only by accents, but also by stresses. The first prize winner's voice was very pleasant, although not quite free, and he sung the second song, "Love went a riding," most effectively and vigorously. The voice of the second prize winner was sympathetic in tone, his second song, "Ochone," being sung very well, indeed.

Large mixed voice choirs (W. J. Watson Memorial Challenge Cup). Tests: "On Himalay" (Bantock), "The humped-back fiddler" (Brahms).—1, Warrenpoint and Rostrevor Choral Society—170 marks (Mrs. McCully conducted in the absence of Mr. G. White); 2, Tandragee Town Choir—159 marks (con-

THE "GENEVA SPIRIT."

WHERE IRELAND CAN HELP.

Princess Radziwill addressed a public meeting under the auspices of the League of Nations Society in the Mansion House, Dublin, last night, her subject being "The League of Nations as an International Clearing-House."

She was introduced by the Chairman, Mr. Thomas Bodkin, who said that she had won victories in peace, no less renowned than the victories won in war by her distinguished ancestors. The League served as a great clearing-house for the dissemination of intellectual opinion as the nucleus of an organisation of those social services that were going to make, in the long run, this world liveable in without resource to war.

THE LEAGUE'S FUTURE.

Princess Radziwill, in the course of her address, gave a sketch of the history of the League. She thought it better, she said, to look forward to the future instead of looking at past history. The League of Nations at present was the answer to the threat of war on the part of nations. The League had now been in existence for ten years. Quite certainly and definitely, she said, the League was growing in force and in power. (Applause.)

Speaking of the "Geneva spirit," the Princess said that it was a real thing. It was a spirit which Ireland could help forward in the way of the pacification of the world. That was why she was appealing to an Irish audience that night. Ireland had realised that it was obliged to conduct its foreign policy through the machinery of the League. In 1923, when the Irish Free State applied for membership to the League, there was not a single State that said "No." When the Free State representative appeared before the Assembly he was received with general applause.

TARIFF BARRIERS.

Proceeding, the Princess said that the development of industry was not so simple and easy as it sounded and looked. Tariff barriers were a great danger to the peace of the world. (Applause.) But the cause of arbitration had made great progress. They had forty States recognising that disputes had to be settled by law and not by force of arms. Ireland could play a decisive part in the work of the League, and Ireland's voice, as the voice of a small nation, could do much good in helping on the work of the League. (Applause.)

THE VOTE OF THANKS.

Senator Douglas, proposing a vote of thanks to Princess Radziwill, said that she had conveyed to them something of the spirit in which the work of the Secretariat of the League of Nations was carried on.

Miss Stafford, who seconded the motion, said that the fact that Princess Radziwill had been sent by the League of Nations as an ambassador to this country was, perhaps, the best testimony that could be given to the position of women in the League.

Dr. Lombard Murphy supported the motion, which was cordially passed.

ITS AIM AND OBJECT.

Princess Radziwill gave a short address yesterday afternoon to the members of the Women's International League of Peace and Freedom at the United Arts Club, Upper Fitzwilliam street, Dublin. Her subject was "World Peace through International Understanding," and she spoke of her work in the League of Nations Secretariat, what the League had already accomplished, and what it was hoped might be accomplished.

The League, she said, had two kinds of enemies—those who say there are only two kinds of people, saints and sinners; those who belong to the League and those who do not. But the people at Geneva were no more saints than anywhere else in the world. They are a body of practical people, who have to face difficulties, and very often have to give in to a compromise; and no one who has got to give in to a compromise will ever be a saint. There are other enemies—those who say the League has done nothing: there is fighting going on still all over the world after the League has been in operation for ten years. Certainly fighting is still going on, because the nations of the world have not yet understood the spirit of the League and the spirit in which it is working.

"We realise," the speaker said, "that another war is bound to bring about the downfall of civilisation. We can say to-day that the crisis that arose after the war has been overcome, but we know in Geneva that another war would not enable us to overcome such a crisis. Settlement of disputes without war needs some kind of machinery. Our machinery in Geneva has for its whole aim and object, peace.

Summarising what the League had already accomplished, Princess Radziwill pointed out that 34 new treaties were registered in 1929 as compared with 15 in 1928. In December, 1929, the total number of treaties for pacific settlement of disputes registered was 130.

Mrs. Kingston presided.

FUNERAL OF LADY EVERARD.

The interment took place yesterday at Donaghpatrick, near her late home, of Lady Louisa Charlotte Everard, widow of the late Sir Richard W. Everard, of Randlestown, Navan, who died last July, within a month after succeeding to the title, on the death of his father, Senator Sir Nugent T. Everard. Sir Richard's widow had been ailing since January 14th last. She was a daughter of the late Mr. R. H. Metge, of Athlumney, Navan, who, about forty years ago, was the Home Rule Member of Parliament for Meath. She was about fifty years of age.

The Rev. Mr. Colquohoun, Donaghpatrick, officiated, and the funeral was private.

The chief mourners were Sir Nugent Everard (son), Dowager Lady Everard (widow of the late Colonel Sir Nugent T. Everard) and Major R. Metge (brother).

Admiral Craig Waller, C.B., who was yesterday elected President of the County Meath Agricultural Society, in room of the late Senator Everard—who for thirty years held that post—proposed a resolution with Lady Everard, and, in doing so, on behalf of the society, paid a tribute to the work performed for agriculture by the late president during his lifetime.

CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY EGG MARKET.

The Church Missionary Society are holding their annual "egg market," in aid of the medical mission work of the Society, in the Hibernian Church Missionary Hall, 35 Molesworth street, Dublin. The supporters of the mission have been generous in their contributions of eggs and country produce. The sale will be open again all day to-day.

ADJUDICATOR AND CHOIRS.

"We may fast become merely a nation of listeners, and instead of being a people who do things, we may simply develop into a people who receive things, and the whole creative aspect of music may be lost," declared Mr. A. Scott, adjudicator. The whole glory of a festival came from its choirs, and he was disappointed at the few choral entries, because until they got more choirs the Portadown Festival would not be the success it deserved to be and could be. There was no reason why every village about there should not produce a choir that would enhance the music of the district, because it was much more important than a broadcasting or a gramophone set, which would do no good. The most highly-organised music was church music, and there was nothing like a choir for making a jolly family.

The first prize winners realised the meaning of the words and the meaning of the first song, and their singing had poetry about it, and a tender sympathetic touch, which other choirs lacked. The second song had vitality and strong rhythmic quality. There was a merry mood about it.

Duet, for any two adult voices. Test: competitors' selection.—1, Miss W. Wallace and Mr. H. Montgomery, Belfast—92 marks.

Their singing, said Dr. Bairstow, was the best thing heard that night.

At Blackrock Urban Council last night—Mr. Charles McKernan (chairman) presiding—votes of condolence with the relatives of the late Rev. Jeremiah McCarthy, C.C., Blackrock, and with the relatives of the late Mr. A. H. Kelly, who had been a member of the Council for the past twenty-five years, were passed.

RATHMINES FLATS SANCTIONED.

RATES ON ELECTRICITY UNDERTAKING.

EXEMPTION CLAIMED.

It was announced at a meeting of the Rathmines and Rathgar Urban District Council yesterday that the Minister of Local Government and Public Health had sanctioned the Council's scheme for the building of seventy-five two-roomed, self-contained flats at Holyfields and Mountpleasant, sites already developed.

The Chairman (Mrs. Kettle) said that the next business was to obtain the sanction of the necessary loan, which they hoped to obtain without delay.

Messrs. Morris and Kavanagh were appointed quantity surveyors for the work.

A letter was read from the solicitors to the Council, Messrs. W. G. Shannon and Co., in reference to the holding of a Local Government Department inquiry into the application by the Council for powers compulsorily to take over property for the widening of the thoroughfare at Upper Rathmines. Inspector Courtney, it was stated, had indicated that he would report in favour of the application.

THE ELECTRICITY UNDERTAKING.

A letter from the Electricity Supply Board stated that the Board was aggrieved by the valuation upon its property in the Rathmines and Rathgar district, which, it contended, should be exempt from rates on the ground that the undertaking was of a public character for the benefit of the country as a whole, and hereditaments in the occupation of the Crown or the State. If it were held, the letter further stated, that the Board was not entitled to have the generating station and the mains distinguished as exempt, the Board would appeal against the valuations as being excessive and made upon an erroneous basis.

The Town Clerk explained that in 1915 the valuation was £686. In 1929 it was £851, and subsequently it was fixed at £1,166. For the present year the valuation was altogether £1,080, a reduction of £86. While exemption of the property was claimed, the mains within the township were subject to a valuation of £2,400 for rates.

Mr. Byrne asked whether it was suggested that the mains also should be exempt.

The Chairman—Apparently.

Mr. Gogan said that the exemption in this case would mean an increase of 4d. in the pound in the rates, and, as an increase was already likely outside this, he opposed the application.

The Chairman said that claims of this description were being made to other centres. So far, the Council had not received a penny compensation for the confiscation of its electricity undertaking. She proposed that the claim should be sent to the Commissioners of Valuation, with a submission that the exemption should not be allowed.

Mr. Byrne seconded the motion, which was unanimously adopted.

TRAMWAY COMPANY'S CLAIM.

The Dublin United Tramways Company also wrote applying for a revision of the valuation on its property in the Council's district.

It was decided unanimously that the application should be forwarded to the Commissioner of Valuation, with the intimation that the Council was not in agreement with the company's proposal.

A letter was read from the Local Appointments Commission, recommending the appointment of Mr. A. J. O'Neill, Merrion square, Dublin, as surgeon dentist to the Child Welfare Committee.

Miss ffrench Mullen asked were they obliged to accept this recommendation. They had asked specially that a woman should be appointed.

The Chairman said that this was the first intimation which they had received.

On the motion of Mr. Gogan, seconded by Miss ffrench Mullen, the consideration of the recommendation was referred to the Child Welfare Committee.

Operation saved by Radox

You know the throbbing, burning agony of a corn on the ball of the foot, the kind that punishes you at every step. Now imagine the deep satisfaction of finding the pain easing up; of examining the old offender and finding it all softened and soothed and loose—inviting your gentle assistance to lift it out bodily . . . That is the way Radox is removing corns every day. Here's an interesting case in point:—

"Although a young man of 21 years, I have suffered agony with a corn growth on the ball of my left foot for the last six months. I was told by the chiropodist that my case was uncommon. My treatment lasted four weeks, and at the end of that time he told me if the growth came back it would mean an operation and lying up. Well, it did come back, just as bad again. As a last hope I tried Radox, and persisted for three weeks, and I really say Radox did the trick, and what a relief now."

20th March, 1930. H. L. F., Ilford, Essex.

In a Radox footbath, all hard skin, all callouses just naturally melt away under the influence of certain chemical salts which attack dead skin. The oxygen which is released by Radox penetrates the pores of the skin, carrying these softening salts right to the base of the corn which is thus loosened so that it may be picked out painlessly, root and all.

YESTERDAY IN DAIL EIREANN.

MR. COSGRAVE RETURNED TO OFFICE.

FIANNA FAIL LEADER DEFEATED BY THIRTY-NINE VOTES.

ONLY LABOUR PARTY SUPPORTS LABOUR CANDIDATE.

In Dail Eireann yesterday the proposal to nominate Mr. de Valera, leader of the Fianna Fail Party, for the Presidency of the Executive Council was defeated by ninety-three votes to fifty-four.

Only the Fianna Fail members voted for the motion. One Labour member and one Independent member abstained from voting.

The proposal to nominate the leader of the Labour Party received exactly thirteen votes—the full strength of his own party—and eventually Mr. Cosgrave was nominated by eighty votes to sixty-five.

"THE SAVIOUR OF HIS COUNTRY."

FIANNA FAIL PROPOSES MR. DE VALERA.

The SPEAKER took the chair at 3 p.m., and announced that the business before the House was the nomination of a President of the Executive Council.

Mr. O'KELLY (F.F., Dublin, N.), moved that Deputy de Valera be nominated for the position. He did so, he said, because he thought that only a man of Deputy de Valera's great capacity could, with any promise of early success, show the portion of the country which the Free State Government was permitted to control a safe road out of the dangers and difficulties that at present confront it. He described Mr. de Valera as the outstanding figure of their generation. No man of their time had proved himself more fitting to be the leader of the Irish people,, and no man in that House was as likely as he to restore to their people that confidence in themselves, that pride in their race, that enthusiasm, that hope, that spiritual outlook, that determination to retrieve the fallen fortunes of their country, and that "will to victory" that was essential before any progress could be made on the road to real freedom and prosperity.

MR. DE VALERA'S RECORD.

Since first he dramatically entered Irish public life, Eamonn de Valera had been looked to in times of greatest danger and difficulty to save the country from the perils that threatened. His first great achievement as leader of the Irish race was to save the manhood of the nation from decimation, and, at a later crisis, it was he who, throwing all thoughts of place and power, personal advancement and popularity aside, stood with the virile youth who remained true to the national faith and tradition and fought to save the country's honour.

Deputy de Valera was the man under whose wise and courageous leadership the good name of Ireland was raised to heights unknown before, even in their history of great achievements. Under his guidance the fame of the Irish people for steadfastness to principle, for courage in facing fearful odds, and for self-sacrifice in the national cause, became known in every city and town in the world, as well as in sparsely-populated places in the less known continents. With him to lead, they witnessed in their own day their national aspirations brought closer to complete realisation than at any time since the days of the great Owen Roe O'Neill. The name of Eamonn de Valera, in fact, became synonomous, not alone with Ireland, but with the freedom-loving, courageous and high-minded race that he represented.

They had that day to face a situation that required the ablest men of their race to deal with it. During the régime of the late Government their country had been going from bad to worse, largely through want of proper leadership. Their green isle, one of the most fertile countries on the earth, sparsely populated as it was, had thousands of families in their cities, towns and rural areas whose daily lot was hunger. Hundreds of thousands of their ablest and best young men and women had been forced to flee the country to search in the overcrowded cities of England, Scotland, the United States, Australia and Canada for the sustenance that was denied them at home.

"ILL FARES THE LAND."

Many thousands of acres of their fertile lands had gone out of cultivation; their industries were either declining or being allowed to be bought up and controlled by foreigners in the interest of foreigners. Despite the widespread unemployment in all classes of trades, vast numbers of their people were without proper housing. Sickness, disease, and a high mortality among their infants was the daily report from all quarters.

In fine, the condition of the country was such that a radical change was necessary, and must come soon if the nation was to be saved and if the people were to be afforded an opportunity to live and bring up their children with any prospect of even modest comfort in their own land. That change was not alone due—it was overdue, and he proposed Eamonn de Valera as President because he believed that he was the man—the only man—in public life to-day whose ability and personality would enable the Irish people to face the future with confidence.

If the grave unemployment problem was to be solved; if their lost industries were to be revived; if their remaining industries were to be saved and developed; if the land of Ireland was to be restored to tillage and the people of Ireland provided with a proper living in their own land; if the homeless and houseless thousands of families were to be given proper and sanitary shelter, and the thousands of infants who died yearly to be given a chance, under proper healthy conditions, to live and thrive, he believed it was under the talented and courageous leadership of Deputy Eamonn de Valera that that could best be achieved.

THE MAN IN THE GAP.

He believed that Mr. de Valera's ripe scholarship, his prudent statesmanship, his simple faith and his ardent patriotism would enable him to face unflinchingly the grave and pressing problems that fronted the people. He believed that not alone would Mr. de Valera face these difficulties with courage and capacity to solve them, but that he was the man who would, at the same time, successfully restore among Irishmen that unity of aim and of action which, unfortunately, had been lost to them in recent years.

In conclusion, Mr. O'Kelly said that he was satisfied that Mr. de Valera, more than any other man to-day, would make it possible to see the national ranks closed up once more, and the men of their race who stood always for Ireland first, again massed shoulder to shoulder in a great, all-embracing national movement whose object would be the restoration of the prosperity and the unity of their motherland through the attainment of that sovereign independence which was Ireland's God-given right.

Mr. LEMASS (F.F., Dublin S.) formally seconded the motion.

LABOUR LEADER'S PLAIN WORDS.

NO SUPPORT FOR ENEMIES OF THE TREATY.

Mr. O'CONNELL (Labour, Mayo S.) said that they must choose a Government which would be prepared, without question or subterfuge, to give legislative and administrative effect to the wishes of the people as expressed through their elected representatives in that House. That was the foundation of parliamentary government. If this were a country with a long parliamentary history behind it, a change of Ministers would be governed by comparatively simple considerations, because in that case certain fundamentals would be taken as granted. That, unfortunately, was not the position, because here the fundamentals themselves were an issue.

It might be well to examine for a moment what those fundamentals were. In the first place, that Parliament was a sovereign Parliament. No person and no power outside the country had a right to impose its will on that Parliament or to dictate to it what it should or should not do. It was without question or equivocation a de jure as well as a de facto Parliament. Any person who denied or questioned or even doubted the sovereignty of that Parliament, who denied or questioned or even doubted its moral right to make and administer the laws of this State, and to insist on the strict observance of these laws, was not, in his humble opinion, a suitable person to be entrusted with the control of the powers which were inherent in that Parliament.

MR. DE VALERA'S OWN WORDS.

Applying that test to the candidate whose name was before them for nomination as head of the Government, were they in a position to say that he accepted without question or reservation the proposition laid down? If there was any doubt, they had Deputy de Valera's words spoken in that House in March, 1929, when he said—

> "We are asked to state clearly what our attitude towards this House is. I have on more than one occasion said exactly what our attitude was. I still hold that our right to be regarded as the legitimate Government of this country is faulty, that this House itself is faulty."

On that occasion Deputy de Valera had said that his party had come into the Dail because they were not able to get a majority of the people's representatives to meet outside that assembly. and again had said. referring to a certain organisation, of which he and his party had been members up to 1925, that those who continued on in that organisation could claim the continuity which Mr. de Valera's party had claimed up to 1925. Those significant statements had never been withdrawn, but had, in fact, been repeated, in somewhat different form, by prominent followers of Deputy de Valera.

"So long as these views are held by Deputy de Valera," said Mr. O'Connell, "no vote of mine will be cast to enable him to become head of a Government chosen by this House."

THE PARTIES AND THE TREATY.

There was a second consideration related to the first, and which many Deputies would like to see placed in cold storage. That was the Treaty. There should be no need to reiterate the position of the Labour Party on that issue. The failure of the Labour Party to give unqualified support to the Cumann na nGaedheal Party in everything it did was taken by some Government Deputies as opposition to the Treaty. According to enlightened Deputies like Messrs. Heffernan, Seumas Burke, and Byrne, the Treaty was a "baby" belonging to Cumann na nGaedheal, and unless one belonged to that party one had no right to nurse the "baby," or to have any feeling towards it, but a desire to commit infanticide.

MR. COSGRAVE.

"In regard to the Treaty," said Deputy O'Connell, "we stand where we have always stood—where we stood in 1922, when, despite the death notices which we all had in our pockets, we came in here in order to use to the fullest extent the powers which were given under the Treaty. We accept the Treaty, and we recognise the institutions set up under the Treaty. We accept it as the irreducible minimum, in the same spirit as Griffith accepted it, regarding it as no more the final word than we do this the final generation, and keeping in mind Parnell's dictum, that 'no man has a right to set bounds to the march of a nation.'"

FIANNA FAIL'S "DIVERS TONGUES."

He hoped that he had made it perfectly clear where Labour stood, but he was afraid that, in so far as the attitude of Deputy de Valera and his party to the Treaty was concerned, he was in the same position as the vast majority of the people of the country were—he did not know exactly what that attitude was.

On that question members of Fianna Fail spoke with "divers tongues," though he was willing to believe that Fianna Fail was now beginning to realise, after a lapse of eight years, that the attitude taken by Labour in 1922 had much to recommend it, and that, despite all the talk to the contrary, that attitude was not inconsistent with the fostering of a national spirit and a national outlook.

Deputy Lemass's speeches would, of course, convey the contrary impression, and if one were to believe half of what came over the cables from the American itinerary, foolish or timid people could not be blamed if they assumed that Deputy de Valera's accession to power might involve "immediate and terrible war."

He would assume, however, that Fianna Fail's attitude was gradually tending towards Labour's view. While Labour said in effect, however, "Forget for the moment the limitations imposed by the Treaty; bend all your energies to the task of economic development," Fianna Fail reversed that order. Fianna Fail made the Treaty issue the first plank in their programme, and not only that, but they said in effect that they could not even hope to make economic progress until that issue was got rid of, until partition had been removed, and full and complete independence had been obtained.

WHAT MR. DE VALERA WOULD DO.

He thought it was clear that if they were to accept the statements of the accredited leaders of Fianna Fail as being sincerely and honestly meant, they could have no doubt that if Deputy de Valera found himself as head of the Government he would consider it his first duty to remove the degrading obligations of the Treaty, to get rid of partition, and to sever the last link between this country and Britain.

Labour, on the other hand, thought that the first duty of any Government elected by that House was to tackle seriously and earnestly and determinedly the social and economic ills from which the country was suffering. In their opinion there was ample scope within the Treaty and the Constitution to enable them to institute every reform necessary for the social betterment of their people, and there was no need to wait until the last British soldier left Berehaven before they began to make a serious attempt to use the powers they now had to make the lot of their people happier and brighter than it was under existing conditions.

Labour were opposed to Cumann na nGaedheal because they had not used to the fullest advantage the powers which the Treaty had given them. They were opposed to Fianna Fail because they did not propose to use those powers until they had first got rid of partition, and established complete independence.

WHY?

"Why, in God's name," asked Mr. O'Connell, "can we not all agree to make the fullest possible use of the powers we have got, face up to the facts as we find them, recognise the practical difficulties in the way of securing the fullness of our ideals and all that may be involved in any attempt to remove these difficulties other than by friendly consultation and agreement between all the parties concerned?"

All the talk about "another round with England," "another battle of Clontarf," "a show down with England," and such like statements, foolishly indulged in by supporters and leaders of Fianna Fail and exploited for their own political ends by Cumann na nGaedheal, caused timid people very grave uneasiness and doubt. Such doubt and uncertainty were highly detrimental to national progress. People who took such statements at their face value, and believed that they could only mean ultimate revolution, would not settle down to the serious work of economic reconstruction and development.

"Not only," said Mr. O'Connell, "can we not afford to run the risk of another revolution in this country, we cannot afford even to talk about it. Nations do not stand still. We have power to establish peace and order and good government in this State, to develop its dormant resources and increase its material wealth, to ensure that every citizen in this State is adequately fed, housed, clothed and educated."

THE TREATY'S LIMITATIONS.

If, and when, in the course of their development they found themselves hampered by any limitations in the existing Treaty, or the Constitution set up under it, they could then face up to the task of how such limitations might be removed, but it was more than likely that by the time they reached that point, or long before it, those barriers which now appeared to some to be so formidable would have either completely disappeared or would present little, if any, difficulty in their removal.

In conclusion, he said that he thought it his duty, in view of certain statements that had been made, to say very definitely and emphatically that there was no alliance and never had been an alliance between the Labour Party and either of the big parties in the House. There were fundamental differences between the Labour Party and Fianna Fail, just as there were between Labour and Cumann na nGaedheal, and there could be no alliance between parties whose policies were fundamentally different. It was because of those differences that Labour felt compelled to oppose the election of Deputy de Valera, just as it had hitherto opposed, and would again if necessary oppose, the nominee of Cumann na nGaedheal.

If the action of the Labour Party had the effect of bringing Deputy de Valera and his followers to realise that what the country earnestly wanted was an end to the barren controversies of the past eight years, and the substitution therefor of what was sometimes disparagingly called "a bread and butter policy," then Labour would, in his opinion, and not for the first time, have rendered valuable and lasting service to the National interest.

THE REPUBLICANS "OUTSIDE."

MR. DE VALERA AND THE ORGANISATION.

Mr. DESMOND FITZGERALD, Minister for Defence, said that the Dail proposed to elect a President and a Government, in whom would reside the power to control the destinies of this country, and in whom would reside the power of life and death. The name put before them was that of Deputy de Valera.

Let them consider what was the primary and fundamental principal of Government. It was to maintain social order, to protect the lives and property of its citizens, and uphold a condition of peace. It was from that point of view that they should consider the candidature placed before the House.

Deputy de Valera's name was put before them, and did anyone there know what his policy was? Somewhere about the 10th or the 11th March, 1926, Mr. de Valera made a radical change in his policy. Up to that time he described himself as "President of the Irish Republic," arrogating to himself and those with him the powers of life and death over the people of this country. On the 11th March, 1926, he resigned from the presidency of his organisation.

GENESIS OF FIANNA FAIL.

On the 12th April he announced a new organisation, and on the 16th of May, 1926, Fianna Fail was publicly introduced at a meeting in the La Scala Theatre, Dublin, and on the 24th November, 1926, the first Convention of Fianna Fail was held. When anyone in life was faced with a serious responsibility, that person had not the right to act blindly.

NO RIGHT TO TRUST TO LUCK.

"We here," proceeded the Minister, "are not merely citizens of this State, but are the elected and chosen representatives of the people, and in our hands to-day the destiny of our country is placed. Have we the right to say blindly that we will trust to luck? Is it not our duty to examine the past and to understand what is to be expected from the individual put before us, and his declared policy?"

Could it be said that a people was capable of self-government if they elected a President and a Government which then itself would deny its own legitimacy and its own right to act? Could they be said to exercise political judgment if they elected a Government and, by their own words and their own policy, declared that if they executed a man for murder, they, themselves, would be guilty of murder, whereas if a man outside "executed" another man—that was to say, committed ordinary murder—they would say that the man outside was justified?

MR. DE VALERA'S PLEDGE.

Mr. de Valera had merely surrendered the office he had held in an organisation outside, but had remained a member of that organisation. Not only that, but on the 18th and 19th of December, some six or nine months after that event, he even questioned the legitimacy of his own resignation. Not merely did he not sever his association with that body, but on the 19th December, 1926, he, himself, proposed the ratification of the election of the President of that body. After the election of the new President Mr. de Valera said:—"There is only one thing, and that is, that if at any time anything is decided I will give an undertaking that I will safeguard the Republican position as the leader of Fianna Fail." As leader of Fianna Fail Deputy de Valera gave an undertaking to the body outside this body to safeguard what he called the Republican position.

MURDER OF KEVIN O'HIGGINS.

The Fianna Fail Party came into the Dail following the murder of the Minister for Justice, Mr. Kevin O'Higgins. On the 28th March, 1928, in the Dail he (Mr. Fitzgerald) took the occasion of a debate promoted by the Fianna Fail Party, in which they talked a lot about generous gestures and assurances, to ask for an assurance that if they had, or should at any time get, information that would be of assistance in bringing to justice the murderers of Mr. Kevin O'Higgins, they would make that information available.

What was their response to that? Deputy Little, of the Fianna Fail Party, said that it was absurd to ask such a thing of them; that to give such an assurance would bring odium upon them. Deputy Cooney, Fianna Fail deputy for North Dublin City, said to so act was to become an informer.

PERTINENT QUESTIONS.

If Deputy de Valera were elected President what was the position going to be? asked Mr. Fitzgerald. Was he going to be subject to legitimate authorities or was he not? There were people outside, a body of armed men, who claimed the right to use their arms to wage war on the country, to execute people in this country, and Mr. de Valera tacitly assented to that claim on the part of those people. How was he going to enforce what he considered the law there? What law was going to operate? Was it going to be the law that was promulgated by the Dail or was it going to be the law of the people outside? Was not the proposal that he be elected there a denial of the right of the people of the State to decide what body of men should hold power?

He (the Minister) maintained that unless Deputy de Valera came out and made it perfectly clear to the Irish people that he had abandoned this whole programme, the Irish people had no right to elect him, because it would be a denial of their own right.

A DEFENCE OF FIANNA FAIL.

ATTITUDE TOW[illegible] DAIL AND TREATY.

Mr. LEMASS (F.F., Dublin, N.) said that Labour and Cumann na nGaedheal were opposed to Mr. de Valera, not because they thought he lacked ability for effective administration, but because of something he said eight years ago, when the acceptance of the Treaty was under consideration. They were, apparently, determined that the Treaty controversy must be continued, and that the spirit of the civil war should not be allowed to die. He was surprised that the Labour Party should be willing to co-operate with Cumann na nGaedheal in that policy. Surely there were many problems of great magnitude confronting the Irish people in respect of which the policies of the various candidates for the Presidency could be discussed.

Fianna Fail did not want to be elected on any misunderstandings as to their position. They had made their position clear repeatedly, but, although they could give statements and arguments, they apparently could not give intelligence or understanding to the two delegates who had spoken. (Laughter.) Deputy O'Connell had said that in a normal country there were certain fundamental things which were taken for granted by all parties. It was the one sentence in his speech which was correct. It was precisely because these things were not accepted in this State that it could not be regarded as normal.

Deputy O'Connell had been referring, no doubt, to the Constitution. Fianna Fail could not forget that the Constitution was framed in London, and imposed by threats on the Irish people. They could not accept that document as sacred with that knowledge. They would not be prepared to accept it as sacred until it had been freely revised and amended by the elected representatives of the people.

CONSTITUTION AMENDMENTS.

They knew also that members of the Cumann na nGaedheal Party had no respect for it. They had never attempted to modify their activities because of its provisions, and whenever they found their actions and the provisions of the Constitution in conflict they amended the Constitution. Neither Cumann na nGaedheal nor Fianna Fail were prepared to regard that Constitution apparently as nothing but so much paper. It was only the Labour Party whose one desire was to be respectable in all things that gave any importance to it

Continuing, Mr. Lemass said that the Minister for Defence had read extracts from some mysterious document; apparently furnished to him by some super-intelligent member of the Secret Service. As that document appeared to concern members of Fianna Fail he thought they should have an opportunity of perusing it.

Mr. COSGRAVE said that he intended to make the document available.

Mr. LEMASS—I am glad to know that, and I hope the President will not conceal the identity of the author.

The SPEAKER—What is this document?

Mr. COSGRAVE—It is the report of certain proceedings which occurred outside this House of a body called Comhairle na Poblachta, or something like that. Quite a number of well-known Deputies on the far side of the House contributed to the proceedings.

Mr. LEMASS said that he had gathered from the extracts quoted that a pledge was given to this body by Mr. de Valera that he would do nothing to prejudice the Republican position. He had a distinct recollection of a similar pledge being given by members of the Government, not to a body which claimed to be a Government, but to a body which was, and admitted itself to be, a secret society. It was a very definite pledge given to an armed secret society that they would do nothing to prejudice the Republican position.

IRISH REPUBLICAN BROTHERHOOD.

Mr. MULCAHY (Minister for Local Government) asked for the name of the armed secret society.

Mr. LEMASS—The I.R.B.

Mr. MULCAHY—Does the deputy say that pledges were given to the I.R.B. to that effect?

Mr. LEMASS—Yes.

Mr. MULCAHY—If that were so I ought to know something about it. I absolutely deny that it was ever done.

Mr. LEMASS said that the pledge was given verbally. The speech of the Minister for Defence was interesting in view of recent developments. He had told the House that they could not seriously contemplate giving a vote to Mr. de Valera to secure his election as President because he would give the powers of Government to the gunmen outside. Only a fortnight ago, in the official organ of Cumann na nGaedheal there appeared an article entitled, "The Army and Politics," and it revealed a mentality in relation to the powers of the Army, of which members on the Fianna Fail side of the House were never guilty. Fianna Fail had never admitted that the armed forces in this country, or any armed force, could dictate to the Government what it should do.

"I was once Minister for Defence in a body which claimed to be a Government," said Mr. Lemass, "but the armed forces under my control were under control, and I never told them that they could dictate to that body what its policy should be. I do not think the individual on the front bench opposite, who also occupied a similar position at the same time, ever maintained that attitude in relation to the army under his control, but we find in the official organ of Cumann na nGaedheal a leading article within the last fortnight, which excites the Free State National Army to mutiny, if a Government is elected by this House whose policy it disapproves of."

> "Although the Army has no connection with politics, and although it would not be right for the Army to render assistance to any political party, it might happen that the Army would be bound to subdue a political group for the welfare of the people in general. The members of the Government are servants of the people. If it were apparent that they were not obedient to the people, it would no longer be necessary that the Army should be obedient to them."

INCITING ARMY TO MUTINY.

Was there ever a more dangerous doctrine preached inside or outside that House in the last ten years? asked Mr. Lemass. ("Hear, hear," from the Labour benches.) If not from the Government, from whom was the Army to take orders? He hoped that the Minister would take steps to see that the man who wrote the article would be brought into court and charged with incitement to mutiny, even if he was a colleague on the front bench.

Mr. DAVIN (Labour, Leix-Offaly)—He is a Minister, all right.

Mr. LEMASS, continuing, said that such crimes as the shooting of jurymen were denounced by members of his party long before Cumann na nGaedheal thought fit to make political capital out of them. Was it not an extraordinary thing that nobody was brought to justice for them? No important crime that had been committed since 1927 had figured in the records of any police court. Had a single man been brought to justice for any of the sensational crimes, such as the shooting of jurymen, witnesses and the late Minister for Justice? Did the Minister for Defence think that Fianna Fail were to be criticised for that?

When the Minister looked at the administration of his Department he could find out what was wrong with it. He would find in that Department the explanation why these crimes were possible. When they saw the Minister for Justice deliberately urging those under his control to break the law; when they saw members of the police force charged with assault and fined, they could not have in the police force or the country that respect for law and order which the Minister seemed so anxious to promote.

Fianna Fail were not going to take any lectures from the Minister or his colleagues on the question of the preservation of law and order or on the necessity of denouncing murder. They had always done so, and they had done so when the Minister and his colleagues were silent. They still did so.

WHY LABOUR PARTY IS SMALL.

Continuing, he said that Deputy O'Connell was very much concerned with Fianna Fáil's attitude to the House. So long as the Labour Party could not be accused of being even pale pink in politics, they seemed to think that they had fulfilled all their functions to the Irish people. That was why they were the smallest party in the House, with the exception of the National League. Deputy O'Connell had said that Deputy de Valera would regard any Government elected by that House as having no legal or moral claim to Government. Deputy de Valera never said anything inside or outside the House which allowed that implication to be drawn. They regarded that House as an assembly to which the vast majority of the elected representatives of the people of the twenty-six counties came, and they were prepared to recognise the legislative powers of that assembly; but they also recognised that, even in that respect, its claim was faulty, because there was in existence a political test which debarred one section from being represented there. They were prepared to accept it for what it was—an assembly of elected representatives of the Irish people.

In 1927 Deputy de Valera had made it clear that the sinister design of bringing about a revolutionary upheaval with which their opponents credited them was altogether foreign to their purpose, and that they would proceed as a responsible constitutional Government, acknowledging without reserve that all authority came through the sovereign people; and that before any step likely to involve their safety was taken the people were entitled to be taken into the fullest consultation. That made Fianna Fáil's position quite clear. They stood for the removal, as speedily as possible, of all degrading obligations in the Treaty.

Undoubtedly they could improve the existing position without touching the Treaty at all, but if they wanted to set up here the conditions that all parties professed to desire, they could only do so when they had got a spirit of self-confidence and self-respect revived in their people.

He maintained that Fianna Fail's attitude towards the Treaty and Constitution, and also their economic policy, was clear. They believed that if the House accepted the motion and elected, Eamon de Valera as President of the Executive Council, they would have taken the first steps towards the removal of the various political and economic barriers impeding their progress at present.

"FLOGGING A DEAD HORSE."

AGRICULTURE MINISTER'S CAUSTIC SPEECH.

Mr. HOGAN, Minister for Agriculture, said that he sympathised with Deputy Lemass, who had an impossible task in trying to explain away the inconsistencies of Deputy de Valera. As to opposing Deputy de Valera, it was at this stage like flogging a dead horse, but, as the Minister for Defence had pointed out, they were electing, not a person, but a policy. They wanted to know what was that policy. In most parties they had a leader and a policy, but in Fianna Fail they had three leaders.

Mr. LEMASS—There is only one.

Mr. HOGAN—You are making a mistake. You are not the leader. (Laughter.)

Mr. LEMASS—That mistake seems to be made more often by others than myself.

Mr. HOGAN—The only fault is the old trouble; you have three leaders—one in America standing for war; Deputy Lemass at home standing, temporarily, for peace, and one consistent, sterling patriot, Deputy Sean T. O'Kelly, who stands for patriotism and nothing else. And the three speak in different voices.

If (he continued) circumstances were different, the rôles would be reversed. They might easily have Mr. de Balera here talking peace; they might easily have Deputy Lemass in America talking war, and they might have Deputy Sean T. O'Kelly all the time between the two talking patriotism. Deputy Lemass was concerned that they were raking up the Treaty issues and debating the issues arising in 1922, '23 and '24. "We are not," declared Mr. Hogan; "we are debating more recent issues."

He could well understand that the party opposite would be anxious to hide the events of 1922-23, "because," he added, "they are the most disgraceful chapter in the history of this country."

"THIMBLE-RIGGING."

What was the policy they were called upon to approve of? Whom were they to believe? There were three thimbles. Under which thimble was the pea? The proposal to elect Mr. de Valera was being put forward in an atmosphere of thimble-rigging, and no man in this country knew where Fianna Fail stood. Deputy O'Connell had tried to get it, and he got an answer from Deputy Lemass; but was there any deputy wiser than before Mr. Lemass answered? They were all just where they had been—no further. Deputies opposite must recognise that they must be judged, not by what they said they meant, but by what they actually said.

Proceeding, Mr. Hogan said that Deputy Lemass was in the position, pro tem., of a Constitutional Republican. These two words simply meant that the Fianna Fail Party would take a Republic when England was prepared to give it. Similarly they would, according to Deputy Lemass, pay the land annuities when England got a decree for them, and which decree England would readily get.

Did all that mean, asked the Minister, that Fianna Fail was going to send their colleague, Deputy O'Dowd, into political Siberia?—for that Deputy had said that he would withdraw from public life if another cheque for land annuities were sent to England.

NOT ANTI-BRITISH.

Dealing with the economic policy outlined by Deputy Lemass, the Minister commented on the declaration that Fianna Fail was not anti-British in this matter. 'In that," said the Minister, "he is the same with myself. (Laughter.) Here I am without a national record." (Laughter.)

Mr. LEMASS—You were not even a Home Ruler.

Mr. HOGAN—Not even a Home Ruler. My only claim to glory is that I was with the Deputy in internment for nine months and had three meals a day.

Mr. FAHY (F.F.)—What about Easter week?

Mr. HOGAN—Sure, we were all out in Easter week. (Laughter.)

Mr. FAHY—In the Post Office.

Mr. HOGAN—Surely, the Deputy does not contend that Deputy Lemass was out in Easter week. I was in the Post Office, (Laughter.)

The Minister, proceeding, said that in economic matters Deputy Lemass was not anti-British.

MR. LEMASS'S DARING.

Mr. LEMASS—On a point of order, is not the motion to elect a President?

Mr. HOGAN—"I want to know whose policy we are electing. I am not interested in Deputy de Valera one bit." He went on to declare that Deputy Lemass had announced himself in an article in an English daily paper in favour of Empire free trade, while his leader was—as usual—two thousand miles away from the scene of battle. (Laughter). In that policy Deputy Lemass showed himself in favour of the methods pursued by the Government successfully for the last six years. In another statement made by Deputy Lemass in his article the deputy had said that there was a workable compromise to enable both countries to get the best out of the situation. He (Mr. Hogan) advised the deputy to remember that the only man who could do these things was Mr. de Valera, for others who had tried to avail of it were let down by the same Mr. de Valera, and they all knew what had happened.

MR. DE VALERA'S AMERICAN "MUSH."

Mr. HOGAN then proceeded to deal with statements made by Mr. de Valera, as published in the American Press, in which Mr. de Valera spoke about "another round with England," "another Battle of Clontarf," and "a show down with England." He (Mr. Hogan) did not want another battle, and neither did the people, and if there was not to be another battle, what, asked Mr. Hogan, was all the "mush" about? It was also reported that Mr. de Valera had stated that if returned to power he would overthrow the Constitution and abolish the oath that was keeping Sinn Fein out.

Mr. AIKEN (F.F., Louth)—That is a lie.

The SPEAKER called Mr. Aiken to order.

Mr. AIKEN—If the Minister will be truthful I will be nice.

Mr. HOGAN—I don't blame Deputy Aiken. He suffers from a lack of intelligence.

Continuing, the Minister said that the Dail was now asked to elect Mr. de Valera, but he maintained that the country was not prepared to take any risk, and the only explanation of the several voices of Fianna Fail was that the party had no policy. Whatever good nationalism there was in the country was represented by the Cumann na nGaedheal Party.

SLAVES OF THE GUNMEN.

Deputy de Valera had stated that authority rested in people outside that House. Those were the people who shot jurymen and witnesses, and went on with a series of illegalities until checked by the Minister for Justice. Those were the people who, if Mr. de Valera were elected, would be the rulers of the State.

It was an insult to the Dail to ask it to accept that position, and the fact was that the Fianna Fail Party had to realise at last that the people were in favour of the Treaty. The people of the country were in favour of the Treaty, and the party who were not in favour of it must bend the knee to the will of the people.

Mr. COONEY (F.F., Dublin, N.)—Why did not you bend the knee to the will of this House last Thursday?

Mr. HOGAN said that the attitude of the Government, in season and out of season, was that the Government elected there by the Dail was the supreme authority, and that the Army had no right to take sides with or against any Government. The Dail had the right to accept the bill the other night or to reject it. Whatever else might happen the party opposite had no claim to government. They had already done immense damage to the country by civil war, but the moral damage that had been done by their propaganda and their deliberate lying had been far greater than that, and would take a longer time to remedy.

THE NEW NATIONALISM.

He accused that party with having taken the heart out of the country, and said that they had identified nationalism with disorder and decay and inefficiency. For years the Government Party had set their faces against that campaign, and they had taught the people that the foundation of progress and order and the real greatness of the country should come from the people themselves by their courage and sense of honour. If they got a majority there that day they would do what they always did—they would govern. They would see that there the law would be equally and fairly administered.

They stood where they stood for the last eight or nine years. Everybody knew what they had done in the past, and what their policy for the future was. They proposed to continue that policy, to give fair play to everybody, and to carry on economic administration. The country could become great only by the courage and genuine nationalism of its individual citizens. (Applause.)

"A FARCE AND AN INSULT."

Captain REDMOND (N.L., Waterford) said that in listening to the proposer of Mr. de Valera he really wondered whether the proposal was put forward in any seriousness whatever. Mr. O'Kelly knew that the great majority of the deputies in that House were elected in favour of the Treaty, and of the observance of the country's contractual obligations under the Treaty. He ought to know that such a proposition at this time of day was bound to be defeated. Did Mr. O'Kelly and his party think that as long as they pursued the line of hostility to the Treaty they could get a vote of confidence either in that House or in the country? He thought that it was trifling with the House, and an insult to the House, to propose that Mr. de Valera should be elected President of the Irish Free State. It was an absurd proposition to try to place Mr. de Valera in the position of President of the Free State—the man who by his words and actions had done everything possible to prevent the functioning of the Free State Government.

If by any chance the Fianna Fáil Party were elected the Government of the country, would they come there and declare a republic, or would they not? Let them answer that question. The Fianna Fáil Party had declared themselves constitutional Republicans. What did they mean by that? Were they thinking of converting by their propaganda the people of Great Britain—one of the parties to the Treaty—to their doctrine of a Republic for Ireland?

LAST WORDS FOR FIANNA FAIL.

Mr. O'KELLY, concluding the debate, said that the aim of his party was the attainment of an Irish Republic, and that was made clear from every political platform during the elections, and they sincerely hoped to realise that ideal without shedding any blood, either Irish or English.

Captain REDMOND—Answer my question.

Mr. O'KELLY said that if Captain Redmond or anyone else waited for an Irish Republic until England became Republican, it would need a long stretch of patience. They hoped to gain an Irish Republic without shedding any blood, and also to prove to the English people, as well as to the Irish people, that the interests of both peoples would be to have this country peaceful and contented. That could only be achieved by allowing the fullest freedom and expression of opinion, a thing which had not been allowed by their powerful neighbour up to the present.

His party had come into the House for the purpose of using the machinery available there to advance the realisation of the Republican ideal. They might prove to be wrong, but they would give it a trial, and they intended to work for a Republic to the best of their ability.

EASTER WEEK AGAIN.

They waived no jot of their adherence to the Republican ideal, and they were not ashamed to say that, unlike the Minister for Agriculture, they had made some sacrifice. The Minister was fond of jeering and jibing at those who died for Ireland——

Mr. HOGAN—When did I jeer and jibe at the people who died for Ireland?

Mr. O'KELLY—He jeered and jibed at the dead whose sacrifices brought this House into existence, and at those who had not got as much out of it as he has got.

Mr. HOGAN—When and where did I jeer and jibe?

Mr. O'KELLY—We know what he did in Easter Week.

Mr. HOGAN—My reference was not to the people who died for Ireland, but to the spurious patriotism of which the opposite benches are full.

Mr. O'KELLY—You ran like a skunk.

Mr. HOGAN—A skunk does not run.

Mr. O'KELLY—We chased you before, and if necessary we will do it again. We were all in the Post Office. Your President was there, and all credit to him for it, and the Minister for Defence was there, all credit to him for it. I wonder where was Hogan. We did not accept the Treaty in 1921 and 1922 as satisfying Ireland's national aspirations, and we do not accept it now.

PUZZLED.

He could not understand Deputy Redmond saying that to make Deputy de Valera President of the Executive Council would be an insult to the House. In the British Parliament—the Mother of Parliaments—minority parties were elected as the Government, and why should Deputy Redmond call it an insult if Deputy de Valera, the leader of the second largest party in the House, were elected President. Deputy Redmond voted for the "no confidence" vote in the Government, and he (Mr. O'Kelly) would like to know if the fact that he was now appearing as State prosecutor at Green street had changed his mind.

It was clear what Fianna Fail was out for, and what they proposed to do if the House passed this motion.

THE DIVISION.

The motion to nominate Mr. de Valera was then put, and defeated by 93 to 54 votes.

The voting was as follows:—

FOR—FIFTY-FOUR.

Fianna Fail.—Deputies Aiken; Allen, Blaney, G. Boland, P. Boland, D. Burke, Brady, Briscoe, Buckley, Carney, Carty, Clery, Colbert, Cooney, Corkery, Corry, F. H. Crowley, T. National League.—Deputies Redmond and Coburn.

ABSENT.

The following deputies were absent:—

Major B. Cooper (Government, Co. Dublin), Mr. J. J. Killane (F.F., Longford-Westmeath), and Mr. E. de Valera (F.F., Clare).

ONLY THIRTEEN VOTES.

LABOUR LEADERS SOLE SUPPORT.

Mr. MORRISSEY (Lab., Tipperary), in proposing that Mr. Thomas O'Connell be nominated as President, said that they in the Labour Party repeated what Deputy O'Connell had said. They accepted the Treaty and institutions under the Treaty in the same way as these were accepted by the late Arthur Griffith and General Collins, and they proposed, if Deputy O'Connell was elected, to get the last ounce out of that Treaty.

On the question of the Army, he said that

"My friend, Mrs. H., had received so much benefit that she begged me to give Kruschen a trial, although at first I was doubtful because I had tried so many so-called 'cures.' At last, however, I tried some of her Kruschen, and, feeling hopeful, I purchased a bottle, and I can honestly say that before I had finished the bottle my backache was gone. I have suffered for years with kidney trouble and dreadful headaches, and now to be free from the pain altogether is wonderful."

2nd March, 1930. (Mrs.) C., Hatfield.

Kruschen contains vital salts that go right down to the root cause of backache—inactive kidneys which allow impurities to enter the blood. Kruschen cannot fail to start your kidneys functioning properly. Kruschen will bring blessed comfort soon after you begin. And, as you persevere with the "little daily dose," your pains will gradually disappear until finally backache will become no more than a bad memory.

NEWS SUMMARY.

IRELAND.

In Dail Eireann yesterday Mr. Cosgrave was nominated for the Presidency of the Executive Council of the Free State by eighty votes to sixty-five. The proposal to nominate Mr. de Valera was rejected by a majority of thirty-nine, and the Labour nominee received only thirteen votes.—(Pages 7 and 5.)

In the Free State Senate yesterday a motion to set up a Joint Committee of both Houses to investigate the position of migratory labourers with reference to unemployment insurance was adjourned. A second reading was given to the bill to continue the Shop Hours Act in Dublin and district for three and a half years.—(Page 8.)

There were rather heated scenes in the Northern House of Commons yesterday during the third reading of the bill which aims at the suppression of personation at parliamentary and local government elections.—(Page 8.)

The Free State Minister for Local Government and Public Health has sanctioned the Rathmines Urban Council's scheme for the building of seventy-five two-roomed flats in the district.—(Page 4.)

GREAT BRITAIN

The Archbishop of Canterbury, in the House of Lords last night, raised the question of religious persecution in Russia, and appealed to the Government to make friendly representations on the subject.—(Page 7.)

The House of Commons last night concluded the report stage of the Coal Mines Bill.—(Page 8.)

The Japanese reply to the Anglo-American proposals concerning ratios in cruiser tonnage was presented to the British and American delegations at St. James's Palace, London, yesterday. It enables the negotiations to be continued.—(Page 7.)

ABROAD.

SPORTING.

At Derby yesterday Boldero won the Derbyshire Handicap.—(Page 10.)

FINANCIAL.

London Stock markets were firmer in tendency, with Rubbers and Oils strong spots.—(Page 12.)

Lombard street was well supplied with credits, and loans over the night were made at 3½ down to 3 per cent. Bill rates were well maintained. The Bank bought £11,600 in bar gold, making the net influx for the week £1,036,467.—(Page 12.)

Mr. Cosgrave's Return.

Dáil Eireann has belied Sir John Mahaffy's familiar saying that in Ireland the inevitable happens never and the impossible always. Yesterday the combined vote of Cumann na nGaedheal, the Independents and the Farmers re-elected Mr. Cosgrave as President of the Free State's Executive Council. The sitting of the Dáil, which began at three o'clock, lasted until midnight. Mr. S. T. O'Kelly proposed Mr. de Valera's election in a speech which took much care of the sounds, but left the sense to take care of itself. Mr. T. J. O'Connell, of the Labour Party, demolished Mr. O'Kelly with a plain and effective statement of facts. The division showed that all parties were present in full force. There are 152 deputies in the Dáil. Of these 147 voted, and the united forces of Cumann na nGaedheal, Labour, Independents and Farmers dashed Mr. de Valera's hopes of power by a majority of 39 votes. Then Mr. O'Connell, as leader of the Labour Party, was proposed for the vacant presidency, and was defeated by 78 votes against 13. In this division Fianna Fáil abstained, and the rest of the House voted solidly against Labour. Afterwards Mr. Cosgrave was nominated, and upon the midnight hour his followers' patience was rewarded. By a majority of 15 votes Cumann na nGaedheal, Independents and Farmers carried him back to office against the joint opposition of Fianna Fáil and Labour.

We do not know if Mr. Cosgrave felt any real anxiety in the recent crisis; certainly he has reason to be satisfied with its outcome. In the first place, the incident has tightened the bonds of party discipline and has lightened the labours of his party Whips. In the next place, Mr. Cosgrave's Government has received assurances of confidence and good-will which cannot fail to fortify its purpose. Like some famous men, it has survived to read its obituary notices, and these, on the whole, were flattering. It is manifest that not only Great Britain, but the world at large, sees in Mr. Cosgrave's rule and influence a prime condition of a great experiment's success. In Ireland public opinion probably would have been more vocal if the result which we announce to-day had not been taken for granted. Finally, this affair has exposed the increasing weakness and disrepute of the forces which still oppose the fait accompli and still seek to disturb the national peace. Yesterday Fianna Fáil's spokesmen revealed once more their lack of constructive ideas and their complete ignorance of the arts of government. There could be no clearer proof of the discredit which has overtaken Mr. de Valera's policy than the Labour Party's scornful repudiation of it. Like Labour, every solid influence throughout the country accepts the Constitution and seeks an end of strife. Mr. de Valera's future is behind him, and the Free State Government's chief danger to-day lies in its tendency towards the abuse of power.

The decisive factor in yesterday's fortunate issue was the vote of the Independent group. It composed the bulk of Mr. Cosgrave's majority, and, if it had been cast against him, his Government would not have returned to power. Here history has repeated itself. For two and a half years the Independents have kept Mr. Cosgrave's Government in office, but that fact represents only a small part of its debt. During seven years the interests for which the Independent members stand in the Dáil have been the social and economic mainstay of the present Administration. Their loyalty to the Constitution has been expressed by their acquiescence in novel conditions, by their generous support of the national finance, by their co-operation in all schemes of public service, and—a very real proof of good-will—by their restraint of criticism which, while perfectly legitimate, must have been embarrassing. Indeed, the Independents have been almost surprisingly patient of the Government, and their constituents have been almost surprisingly patient of the Independents. It has been the practice of more than one Minister to regard the Independents as nuisances at all times when their votes are not required. The Government has made no consistent attempt to promote the minority's special interests or to respect sentiments and traditions which are very dear to it. We are entitled to expect now that the Government, in its thankfulness to be alive—if not through a mere sense of prudence—will revise its attitude to the Independent group. "Every man," said the cynical Walpole, "has his price"; and, if their interests continue to be ignored, the Independent members may become cynical. They may be compelled to demand, as a matter of hard bargaining, the rights which are not yielded to them in a spirit of justice and gratitude.

The Shortage of Clergy.

The position of the Church of England can be summed up succinctly in the statement that in 1928 there were nearly five thousand fewer clergymen than there were in 1921. If this rate is maintained, no clergy will survive at the end of thirty years. Yesterday, at the annual Congress of the National Union of Students at Cambridge, various self-constituted authorities ventilated their views. Mr. C. E. M. Joad, whose iconoclastic books consort ill with his claims to an interest in the Church's future, remarked that "clergymen fiddle while the Church burns." Developing his theme, he pointed out that many young men, who might wish to be ordinands, were deterred by the knowledge that thirsting humanity was comforted only by "controversies over reservation and chatter about aumbries." We need not explore the words of the other speakers, except, perhaps, those of Mr. P. J. Shields, of the Royal College of Surgeons, Dublin, who said "that the irreligion of the age is due more to the lack of thoughts of most of us than to the permanence of any definite course of thought." Mr. Bertrand Russell referred harshly to the undesirable influence of women on the mental development of children. Yet, while we may criticise the comments of modernity, we cannot ignore altogether the opinions expressed at Cambridge, whether justified or unjustified, since the mission of the Church ought to embrace the whole world, including Cambridge. Undoubtedly, the doctrinal differences that exist to-day discourage many young men from what is, in fact, their spiritual vocation. It is possible, however, that the real cause of the Church's present sterility lies even deeper. Where is the pentecostal vigour of the first bishops of Christendom? Where is the energy of a Francis Xavier or a John Wesley? The Church of St. Martin's in the Fields is a manifest example of the success that always attends pristine energy. "Dick" Sheppard is more than a name in London; yet he is no theologian, no gifted "publicist." He strove only to apply Christian teaching to modern needs, with the result that the Church of St. Martin's in the Fields draws packed congregations to-day. Our generation, as Mr. Joad suggested, looks to mysticism for what it does not find in revelation. How else does "spiritualism" flourish? The Church of England must find her balance quickly, and subordinate intriguing debates concerning reservation to the propagation of her Master's Word. The Twelve Apostles wasted little time on theology.

Brighter Hotels.

The problem of British hotels was discussed at some length on Tuesday during a sitting of the Licensing Commission in London. Hotel-keepers in England take the view that they are handicapped unfairly by existing regulations in regard to the hours during which intoxicating liquor can be supplied to their customers, and they hold, with some show of reason, that the greater liberty which is enjoyed in this respect by continental hôteliers works to the disadvantage of British holiday resorts. Mr. Reeves-Smith, managing director of the Savoy group of hotels, declared that bona fide hotels ought to be allowed to serve drinks with meals at least two and a half hours after the official closing time. In the course of his evidence Mr. Reeves-Smith said that English waiters were not nearly so good as those on the Continent. The latter, who served an apprenticeship of five years, were taught to behave as hosts greeting their own guests. Lord Amulree said that, in his experience, British hotels to-day were worse than they were forty, or even fifty, years ago, and were considerably dearer than hotels in foreign countries. What would Lord Amulree say of Irish hotels? One of the chief obstacles in the way of a flourishing tourist traffic in this island is the lack of good hotels. Palatial establishments of the Grand Babylon type are not needed, but there is vast room for improvement in the existing houses. What could be more depressing than the "commercial room" of a country hotel in Ireland? What could be less inviting than the menu of eternal steaks and chops, badly cooked, and served without the slightest attempt at daintiness, or even efficiency? The smallest town or village on the Continent has a hotel which, at least, is clean and attractive to the eye. We do not agree with Mr. Reeves-Smith that an extension of the licensing hours would make very much difference. What is wanted is the continental touch—comfort, cleanliness and cheapness, with that measure of personal service which makes the visitor feel immediately at home.

Civic Salaries.

Advocates of drastic economy will applaud the decision of the Belfast City Council in regard to a proposal to increase the salaries of its officials. Recommendations were made to the Council involving an increased expenditure of some £6,000 per annum in higher salaries; but the Council, by a majority, refused to allow the proposed increases to apply to any official with a salary of more than £500 a year, and limited the increases below that datum line to £50. This decision has reduced the cost of increased salaries from £6,000 to £3,000, and has caused much discussion in Belfast. During the last few years the City Council has been exceedingly unpopular. Nobody objects to its desire to save the ratepayers' money, but Corporation officials, like other mortals, must live, and, like the rest of mankind also, they hardly can be expected to work for ever without hope of financial increment. The refusal to grant any increase in salary to men with incomes of £500 per annum seems to be unfair. They need more money just as much, or just as little, as their colleagues on a lower scale of salaries, and the principle that £500 must be the ne plus ultra of official hopes is not calculated to attract the right type of man to the city's service. On general grounds, however, the citizens of Belfast have cause to rejoice in the Corporation's obvious desire to please them. For many years the Belfast City Council, like the old Corporation of Dublin, was honeycombed with jobbery, and every sign of reform ought to be welcomed. In this instance the officials are the innocent victims of circumstances, which, on the whole, indicate a change for the better in Belfast.

HATRY AT THE LAW COURTS.

WITNESS IN SALARY CLAIM.

Clarence Charles Hatry, Edmund Daniels, and Albert Edward Tabor were witnesses in an action heard in the Law Courts, London, yesterday. They were taken to the Strand entrance in a prison van, and waited in a room near the Court until their evidence was required.

The action, which came before Mr. Justice Wright, was one in which Mr. Alfred John Penney sued Photomaton Parent Corporation, Ltd., for £208, a month's salary as manager of the Corporation supplies department, which, he alleged, was due under an agreement of November 7, 1928.

Mr. D. N. Pritt, K.C., said that the action was for salary due at the end of September, 1929.

Mr. Penney was employed first under an agreement appointing him managing director, whole time, at £5,000 a year, and later under another minute as a part-time employé at £2,500. One of the defences was the Statute of Frauds and another defence was that, by not doing any appreciable amount of work under the agreement, Mr. Penney impliedly repudiated it.

The Photomation Company, said Mr. Pritt, was a company with which Mr. Clarence Hatry had a good deal to do.

The hearing was adjourned.

ILLNESS OF JUDGE WAKELY.

TRIBUTES AT MARYBOROUGH COURT.

At the opening of the Circuit Court sittings in Maryborough yesterday, Judge Gleeson, on his own behalf, and on behalf of the members of the Bench and Bar, expressed regret at the illness of Judge Wakely, and the hope that he might have a speedy and complete recovery.

Mr. Kingsmill Moore, barrister-at-law, said that, as the senior member of the Leinster Bar present, he desired to associate himself with the remarks of the Judge. Judge Wakely was, he believed, at the present moment the oldest judge in Ireland, North or South, England or Scotland. He did not mean that Judge Wakely was the oldest in years, but that he had served the State longer than any other judge at the present moment in office. Everyone knew that during the continuance of his long office Judge Wakely never had varied in the absolutely strict and impartial administration of justice.

Mr. Rolleston, State Solicitor, and Mr. W. X. White, Court Registrar, associated themselves with the remarks.

COURT AND PERSONAL.

The Duke of York presided last night at the festival dinner in the London Mansion House, which was organised by the Royal Association in aid of the Deaf and Dumb. There was a large attendance.

The Duke of Gloucester left Melton Mowbray on Tuesday evening for London, and is spending a few days at Buckingham Palace. On Saturday His Royal Highness will be present at Wembley for the England v. Scotland Association football match.

Princess Helena Victoria is paying visits in the country this week, and will not return to London till next Monday. She will leave on the same day for Yorkshire to stay with Princess Mary at Goldsborough Hall. Her Highness will be back in London to meet Princess Marie Louise on her return from South America on April 15th.

The King and Queen of the Belgians and the Duke and Duchess of Brabant will attend the conference in the Palais d'Academie, Brussels, when Prince Sixte de Bourbon will give an account of his expedition through the Sahara and his experiences on Lake Tchad.

The Duke and Duchess of Northumberland have returned to London from India, and are now in residence at 17 Princes Gate, S.W. The Duke and Duchess of Beaufort are entertaining a party for the Beaufort Hunt Steeplechases, which will take place to-day. Lady Louis Mountbatten is expected to arrive in London to-day on her return from the United States. The Countess of Ossory is making a short stay in London, but will return to Kilkenny Castle for Easter.

Lord and Lady Redesdale have arrived in London, and will spend the next two months at 26 Rutland Gate. Lady Montague of Beaulieu and the Hon. Elizabeth Scott-Montague are returning from the West Indies, and will arrive at Liverpool next Wednesday. Lord and Lady Suffield have returned from the country to their residence in Eaton square, S.W. Sir Francis Newton, High Commissioner for Southern Rhodesia, has returned from South Africa. Sir Evan and Lady Jones have returned from Singapore to their residence in Kensington. Sir Algernon and Lady Firth are returning from Egypt, and will reach London on Saturday.

There was a large attendance at Hawthorne Hill for the Household Brigade Steeplechases, where good sport was witnessed. The Duke of Norfolk was thrown, but fortunately not hurt, when his horse fell in the race for the Royal Horse Guards' Regimental Challenge Cup. Among the visitors were the Duchess of Newcastle, the Duchess of Richmond and Gordon, Lady Rachel and Lady Katharine Howard, the Marchioness of Blandford, the Earl of Erne, the Earl of Northesk, the Earl of Cavan, Lord and Lady Basing, Sir George and Lady Mary Crichton, Viscount Fincastle and Lord Desborough.

The engagement is announced between William G. N. Walker, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Giles Walker, of Over Rankeillour, Cupar, Fife, and Bluebell, third daughter of Sir Michael and Lady Nairn, of Elie House, Fife, and Pitcarmick, Blairgowrie, Perthshire.

The marriage of Mr. John Green, 55 Canterbury avenue, Fulwood, Sheffield, and Ida, third daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward Smith, Mount View, Clonsilla, Co. Dublin, will take place very quietly in London on April 30th.

Many beautiful Coats are being shown at Switzers typifying the important Fashion changes introduced for Spring. The waist-line is slightly higher, skirts are longer and fuller, the materials are distinctly new, the colours are most sponsored by leading designers. Prices, too, are very moderate.

You are invited to wear a necklet of Ciro Pearls for a fortnight, and compare it with real pearls at your leisure. If you are not entirely satisfied, your money will be refunded in full. See the wonderful collection at the Ciro Pearl Department at Messrs. Switzers.

LONDON LETTER.

A SESSION OF THE CABINET.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
WEDNESDAY NIGHT.

A fully-attended meeting of the Cabinet was held at No. 10 Downing street this morning, when a number of important matters were reviewed. The Government is faced with difficulties on all sides. The news from India is disconcerting, to say the least, and the continued growth in the unemployment figures is giving rise to disquietude. Financial matters, naturally, were before the Cabinet, with the close of the financial year and the near approach of Mr. Snowden's Budget day. It is understood that the Chancellor has submitted an outline of his proposals, but that a special meeting of the Cabinet will be called later on to review the proposed Budget in full before it is presented to the House of Commons. The Cabinet also considered the Naval Conference and the proposed formula.

Reassurance.

St. James's Palace was very quiet this morning, since nearly all the members of the various delegations were at their headquarters examining what is regarded as a new situation brought about by the possibilities that the formula now under consideration by the French may prove acceptable. It was stated on trustworthy authority that the conversations now proceeding are satisfactory, and that Annexe F of the Locarno Treaty is an expression of the British interpretation of the obligations outlined in Article 16 of the Covenant, and does not increase those obligations in any way. This is a point of supreme interest to those people who fear that Great Britain may enter into new commitments in the effort to placate French opinion.

Annexe F.

An interesting point about Annexe F of the Locarno Treaty is that it was inserted at the request of the Germans, who asked for certain explanations of the much-debated Article 16 of the Covenant of the League of Nations. The effective part interprets the article as meaning that every State which is a member of the League is bound to co-operate loyally and effectively in support of the Covenant and in resistance to any act of aggression to an extent which is compatible with its military situation and takes its geographical position into account. The Council of the League has to decide on the extent of military assistance to be given by every State, and a point of the utmost importance is that, in the French view, the decisions of the Council are obligatory—an interpretation hitherto declined by Great Britain. It was reported that the French delegation was being encouraged by the progress attendant on the evolution of the formula, and French legal assessors were arriving here to-night to take part in the final drafting of the proposal. Signor Grandi has been kept closely in touch with the progress of the discussions and it is possible that Italy may help towards the solution of the difficulty by the dropping of the word "parity" and the substitution of a less assertive phrase.

Japanese Action.

The news to-day that Admiral Kato, chief of the Japanese Naval Staff, had been received by the Emperor, and had been allowed to present a memorial criticising the naval compromise created quite a minor sensation in Japanese circles; for the exercise of a seldom-used privilege by Admiral Kato, in order to demonstrate a belief that Japan may be placed in a dangerous position, cannot be ignored. A direct appeal to the Emperor is permitted only in a case of national emergency. It was understood at St. James's Palace that the reply from the Japanese Government on the Anglo-American proposal as to cruiser ratios, which was considered at a meeting of the British, United States and Japanese delegations to-day was, in effect, a satisfactory acceptance of the proposal.

A Conversion Scheme.

If the Chancellor of the Exchequer were to adopt all the schemes put forward for new taxation, he would raise many more millions than he needs; but some proposals are based on very sketchy premisses and would stand little chance of passing the financial experts. In this connection it has been stated that the Chancellor of the Exchequer may enter upon a great conversion scheme in connection with the 5 per cent. War Loan; the suggestion is that Mr. Snowden may redeem a part, but not the whole, of the Loan. On this point there is much discussion in the City, and it is claimed that the Chancellor has no legal right to deal with a part of the Loan; for the prospectus, when the Loan was issued, gave no hint of any right to redeem it in part only; and, therefore, it is assumed that redemption must be exercised fully or not at all. The stockbrokers seem to have forgotten, however, that the Chancellor can introduce legislation to carry out the conversion if he deems it necessary.

Butter.

The Empire Marketing Board will issue a report on the National Butter Survey shortly, and probably it will show that London has a very marked preference for Empire butter. In summer Irish butter is sold in large quantities, while in winter New Zealand and Australian produce are sold freely. The preference for Empire butter prevails over the whole of the South of England, and as far north as Birmingham, while the remainder of the west side of Britain, from Wales up to Glasgow, buys Irish butter in the summer and foreign supplies in the winter. On the eastern side of Britain, Danish butter is the most popular at all times. It seems that, both in London and in the provinces, price plays no part in butter preferences; for New Zealand butter is always cheaper than Danish. Yet the demand for New Zealand butter is small throughout the North and in Scotland. Danish butter is usually cheaper than Irish, but London and the South of England buy much more of the Irish product. From personal experience, I should imagine that the demand for Irish butter is limited only by the supply; for many people who are anxious to obtain Irish butter have found it extremely difficult, since supplies are small and uncertain. This is a matter which the Irish Free State Trade Commission is doing much to remedy.

Unemployment in America.

It is said that the unemployment situation in the United States is very grave and that the distress in New York is so acute that long queues of hungry men can be seen waiting for a gift of bread. Mr. Green, the head of the American Federation of Labour, says that unemployment now has reached one out of four of the workers, and that unless something like the dole is initiated he sees revolution ahead. The United States citizen does not understand the dole, and as a rule is opposed to the idea of it, as sapping initiative; but it seems that something must be done to meet the distress now rife among the American working classes.

This evening it was stated at the nursing home that Mr. W. J. Locke, the novelist, who underwent a serious operation yesterday, was going on as well as could be expected.

THE RETURN OF MR. COSGRAVE.

ELECTED AS PRESIDENT OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

THREE DIVISIONS IN DAIL.

MR. DE VALERA'S COMMENT.

MR. COSGRAVE has been again elected as President of the Executive tive Council of the Irish Free State. This decision was reached in Dail Eireann last night after a debate which lasted over eight and a half hours, and during which three motions were discussed.

The motion to nominate Mr. de Valera (Fianna Fail) was defeated by 93 votes to 54; that to nominate Mr. O'Connell (Labour) by 78 votes to 13, Fianna Fail abstaining from voting; while the motion to nominate Mr. Cosgrave was carried by 80 votes to 65.

The following were the divisions:—

Fianna Fail.

Mr. de Valera, who is at Minneapolis, when informed of his defeat, remarked: "It is as I expected."

AFTER MANY HOURS.

DECISION REACHED BEFORE MIDNIGHT.

At twenty minutes to twelve last night Deputy Tim Sheehy, of Skibbereen, flourished his green order paper above his head and cheered louder than all the Government and Independent deputies put together when the Speaker announced that Deputy W. T. Cosgrave had been nominated President of the Executive Council by a majority of 15 votes, the figures being 80 for and 65 against.

Not so pleased was Deputy Cooney, who could be faintly heard saying in the midst of the applause, "Good Freemason banquet to-morrow night," while Deputy Flinn made mooing noises, the significance of which was intelligible only to himself.

The business of nominating a new President started at three o'clock, when Deputy Sean T. O'Kelly nominated Mr. de Valera. Mr. O'Kelly was pale, and the hand which held his typewritten notes was shaking. Nevertheless, he delivered a panegyric on that deputy which resembled nothing more than the phraseology of an illuminated address in the early "'nineties." "The outstanding figure of our generation—a man of simple faith—saved the manhood of the nation from decimation." In short, Mr. O'Kelly regarded Mr. de Valera, in the words of the old ballad, as "a grand man, a great man, and find his equal no one can."

COLD STORAGE.

The leader of the Labour Party was not so complimentary. The Treaty issue should be put in cold storage and social and slum evils given priority. Since the Fianna Fail leader regarded the Dail as faulty, it would be a farce to elect him as its President. There was no need to wait until the last British soldier had left Berehaven before getting to work on the slums.

"Produced by Mortished and Johnson." commented a Fianna Fail deputy, as Mr O'Connell sat down.

The Minister for Defence quoted Pope Leo XIII. on the Divine origin of authority, and described the proposal to elect Mr. de Valera as a proposal "to disgrace the Irish State and to disgrace the Irish people." Mr. de Valera was at present in America trying to get money into his hands by methods so dubious that, if they were adopted in this country, action would have to be taken.

A SLIP.

"We always denounce murder," said Deputy Lemass, "and we hope that all Ministers will, in the course of time, be brought to justice," a mistake which, although immediately corrected, brought roars of laughter from all parts of the House at this naïve association of ideas. Fianna Fail recognised the Treaty, but always regarded it with hostility.

The Fianna Fail policy was merely political thimblerigging, said the Minister for Agriculture. They had three leaders, of whom Mr. de Valera preached war. Mr. Lemass preached peace for the time being, while Mr. O'Kelly preached abstract patriotism in and out of season. Under which thimble was the pea? He warned Mr. Lemass, as a promising young politician, to beware of the wiles of Mr. de Valera. Fianna Fail wanted to break the Treaty because the Treaty broke them.

Captain Redmond described the proposal to elect the Fianna Fail leader as President of the Irish Free State as fooling, trifling and an insult to the House.

END OF ROUND ONE.

When the House had decided by 93 votes to 54 not to elect Mr. de Valera, Mr. T. J. O'Connell was proposed by the Labour Party, which beat its own particular drum, but with none of the Oriental flourish that Fianna Fail had displayed.

Mr. O'Connell modestly lowered his head, and blushed when Mr. Morrissey described him as "an Irishman of Irish people."

Deputy Davin accused the Government of ruling in the interests of the gombeen man. While Labour was stating its case Deputy Hogan, of Clare, beamed down from the public gallery "like the sweet little cherub that sits up aloft."

ALL GENERALS.

The Minister for Finance pointed out that there were only thirteen members in the Labour Party, and, allowing for eleven Ministers and two State Departments, they would, if elected, be all generals, with no rankers.

When Mr. Lemass had declared that Fianna Fail would neither speak nor vote on Mr. O'Connell's candidature, Mr. Corry, with an admirable respect for party discipline, rose up and engaged in an esoteric exchange of epithets with Deputy Anthony dealing with a "Peeler and a Goat."

Mr. T. J. Murphy described the Minister of Finance as a "tinpot Bismarck," who had "made the welkin ring with his uncompromising outlook." The unlucky thirteen marched into the lobby and recorded their votes, the Government and the Independents marched into the other lobby, and recorded 78 votes against them, while the Fianna Fail Party sulked like Achilles in their camp.

ROUND THREE.

The name of Deputy Cosgrave was then proposed in a very brief speech in Irish by Deputy Mongan, and formally seconded in a dozen words by a Government backbencher. Since Mr. Cosgrave was now the only competitor left in the field, a visitor uninstructed in parliamentary procedure might have been excused for thinking that it was all over bar the shouting. Such a person would have been quite correct, as it happened; for the shouting continued for several hours. Deputy after deputy rose up in his place and hurled the conventional brickbats, after eight years' service as battered as the balls of an old-established coconut-shy. Perhaps, they regarded their oratory as the little drops of water which would eventually wear away the Government stone, but the Government were less susceptible to erosion than the coast of Wicklow.

AND SO TO BED.

Mr. Lemass suggested brightly that the re-election of President Cosgrave, far from "ringing the bells of Heaven the wildest peal for years," would be the cause of not a few suicides. Mr. Lemass's constituents must take politics very seriously, indeed, if this is the case.

In the midst of a laboured jeremiad, delivered against the Government by Mr. O'Kelly, Mr. Sheehy suddenly ejaculated in a sleepy voice, "Let's go to bed now," a request which, though hilariously received, was unfortunately not acted upon.

After eight and a half hours of argument about it, the different parties gravely emerged from the same doors as they went in—as, indeed, they had all known was inevitable. They had, however, the satisfactory knowledge that they made the most of an opportunity to broadcast their own praise and their views of their opponents to that fickle audience "the country."

INTERESTED SPECTATORS.

Throughout the sitting the Public Gallery was packed, the spectators standing several rows deep. In the Distinguished Strangers' Gallery were Princess Radziwill and the two famous billiard players, Newman and Lindrum, the Australian, accompanied by Mr. Fitzgerald, of Dublin, and Major J. S. Myles. The women visitors were much distressed by the paucity of the confectionery in the Dail restaurant, with feminine shortsightedness not realising that meringues and petit fours mean little in the stern lives of our legislators. Little they reck of éclairs and macaroons when Presidencies are at stake. However, the visitors left Leinster House satisfied with their day, and possibly more surprised at the result than were Deputies Cosgrave, O'Connell and de Valera.

MR. DE VALERA'S STATEMENT.

"IT IS AS I EXPECTED."

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
MINNEAPOLIS, Wednesday

When informed of his defeat in the election for the Presidency of the Irish Executive Council, Mr. de Valera, the Irish Republican leader, laconically remarked: "It is as I expected."

He vigorously repudiated the report from Dublin that a split had arisen in the Republican Party over the election of the new President. The fact that his principal lieutenant in Ireland, Mr. Sean Lemass, has urged the Fianna Fail to support the nomination of Mr. T. J. O'Connell, the leader of the Labour Party, was, he declared, merely a question of tactics, and did not imply a breach in the Republican ranks.

Mr. de Valera is on a speaking tour in the United States to raise money for the Republican cause. Mr. Lemass and the other Republicans who form the minority in the Dail could, he continued, properly unite with the other minority, the Labour

THE FLIGHT OF A RUM-RUNNER.

BROUGHT TO BY SHELL-FIRE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
NEW YORK, Wednesday.

The schooner Ada M was sighted in the darkness of early morning to-day by the United States patrol boat cruising off Sandy Hook, and immediately made for the open sea with the revenue vessel in hot pursuit.

It showed its heels to the Government craft and ignored the warning blank shots which were fired to induce it to heave-to. Moral suasion proving insufficient, the patrol opened fire with its one-pounder, and after one or two shells had sped close past the rum-runner's bows she decided that discretion was the better part of valour. The pursuit had covered ten miles.

Five thousand cases of liquor were found on board valued at anything from £50,000 to £100,000, according to "Bootlegger" valuation.

"OLIVE OIL."

The spirits were contained in quart tins labelled "olive oil," preserved fruits, or with other similarly misleading indications. An examination of the manifest disclosed the fact that 1,500 cases were missing and unaccounted for.

The crew declared that they had been thrown overboard, but the Excise officers accuse them of having sold them before the vessel was apprehended. The Ada M carried two officers and nine men crew.

The authorities have asked for bail in 5,000 dollars for both the skipper, Byron Ritchy, and the super-cargo, J. E. Godfrey, and in 1,500 dollars for each of the men.

WHAT LED TO THE CAPTURE.

AN APRIL FOOL PIE.

NEW YORK, Later.

The seizure of the Ada M., the Nova Scotian schooner, by coastguards, and the charge of rum-running brought against her captain and crew, have provided both "wets" and "drys" with a good laugh. It was, as a matter of fact, an "April fool" pie that led to the downfall of Captain Byron Ritchy and his men. It happened in this way:

The coastguard patrol boat 145, commanded by Boatswain Karl Schmidt, was cruising about one o'clock yesterday morning fifteen miles off Sandy Hook, when one of the hands on deck watch, chilled with the dripping fog, went to the galley to get a snack before turning in. His eye caught a luscious-looking pie, which he seized and stole away with. Now, this pie had been specially baked by the cook, and consisted of yellow soap, sprinkled on the top with milk and delicately browned to resemble pumpkin pie.

A CRY FROM THE FOG

The cook spotted the pie disappearing, and ran out after its purloiner, calling out in stentorian tones, "April fool." The incident naturally led to some excitement and shouting not only among the prime actors, but among others on board.

The commotion attracted the attention of a motor launch. Over the mist-draped waters came a resounding hail: "Hey, cut out the comedy and get down to business. We want fifty cases. Get busy, we are coming alongside."

On the men from the launch jumping on board they were highly disconcerted to discover that they had got on to a patrol boat, not a rum-runner. They were subjected to a searching interrogation by the coastguards, and ultimately admitted that they were looking for the Ada M., which should have been thereabouts.

THE CAPTURE.

Two or three other launches also hailed the patrol boat, showing the boatswain that he was on a hot trail. Just before dawn the Ada M. was sighted about a mile off the Jersey coast, and was captured after a chase of a mile or two.

"Pretty low I call it" was all Captain Ritchy had to say.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
BOSTON, Wednesday.

The local Coastguard headquarters announce that a British schooner was seized off the Maine coast to-day and is being towed into Boston.

CAPTURED BRITISH MISSIONARIES.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

The reported capture by brigands in China of two British missionaries—the Rev. and Mrs. R. W. Porteous—has been officially confirmed by the British Minister, said Mr. Dalton, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, in the House of Commons yesterday.

He added that urgent representations were being made to the Central Chinese authorities.

Mr. Sanders asked why the bandits who captured these missionaries were called Communist bandits.

Are not all Communists bandits? queried another member.

Mr. Dalton said—We have no information as to the precise band of brigands concerned. (Laughter.)

BOMB EXPLODES IN GERMAN STORE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
HAMBURG, Wednesday.

A panic was caused during the busiest shopping hour of the day by the explosion of a bomb in a department store belonging to Messrs. Tietz. The shop was crowded with customers late this afternoon, when there was a deafening blast, which blew out windows, wrecked shelves and demolished parts of the walls on the second storey. Fortunately, however, the force of the explosion was upwards and found little resistance from the many windows in the upper part of the building. Otherwise there would have been many casualties among the throngs of shoppers.

Party, to bring about the election of a President of the Executive.

Mr. de Valera took strong exception to the statement of Mr. William Davin, a member of the Irish Labour Party, that they would not, in any circumstances, support Mr. de Valera, because his party was committed to support the Irish Treaty with Great Britain.

"Mr. Davin's statement is nothing new," declared Mr. de Valera. "Our differences with the Labour Party can only be settled by an election. The Labour Party has committed itself to the Treaty, and has constantly opposed us, but we get a bigger vote from the workers than the official Labour Party."

He added that he proposes to continue his speaking tour in America in spite of political developments in Ireland.

LONDON NAVAL CONFERENCE.

THE COMPROMISE PROPOSALS.

TOKIO'S REPLY.

AMERICANS' VERY HOPEFUL VIEW.

The reply from Tokio to the Anglo-American proposals concerning ratios in cruiser tonnage was presented to the British and American delegations when they met the Japanese delegation at St. James's Palace yesterday. The Japanese official spokesman said that the "instructions," as the reply is termed, from the Tokio Government enabled negotiations between the delegations to be continued.

He added that the reply indicated no final agreement.

He also stated that no agreement upon the ratios was reached by the three delegations in London, but that they all agreed to submit them to Tokio. Thus negotiations between the three Powers are in an intermediate stage and will be continued.

The heads of the delegations yesterday decided to postpone the plenary meeting arranged for Friday next.

JAPAN'S ATTITUDE.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

The following official communiqué was issued from the Secretary-General:—

"The heads of delegations met at St. James's Palace this afternoon at four o'clock. Mr. Wakatsuki announced that the Japanese delegation had now received the reply of the Japanese Government on the compromise proposals negotiated between the American, United Kingdom and Japanese delegations.

"The reply states that the Government, desirous of co-operating to the full in promoting the Conference's success, recommend the acceptance of the proposals, with certain reservations, which still have to be discussed in detail.

"The Chairman stated that the head of the American delegation and himself had already had an opportunity of expressing their deep appreciation of the spirit and substance of this reply.

"A comprehensive report of the Secretary-General on various questions of method and detail still outstanding was examined.

"It was agreed that the plenary session, which had been fixed for Friday, should be postponed owing to the circumstance that the progress of certain conversations, which it is undesirable to interrupt at this stage, might be affected by a public statement concerning them."

THE PLENARY MEETING.

The date of the postponed plenary meeting will be determined entirely by the progress of the Anglo-French conversations concerning the formula to obtain French security.

The postponement does not mean that the conversations are going badly; on the contrary, they are going satisfactorily; but it is felt that it would be futile to hold a plenary meeting at which it would be impossible to discuss with any finality the political issue, which is the crux of the whole Conference.

YESTERDAY'S MEETINGS.

Three important meetings were held yesterday. The first was a conversation between M. Briand and Mr. Henderson concerning the political aspect. This conversation will be continued to-day.

The second was a meeting of the British, Japanese and United States delegations, when the reply was presented by Mr. Wakatsuki to the Anglo-American proposals, sent some time ago to Tokio.

Mr. Wakatsuki went over the proposals in detail, and then communicated the sense of the telegram he had received from Tokio. The contents of the telegram were received with great satisfaction.

It was arranged for the three delegations to meet at 11 o'clock to-day at St. James's Palace to discuss various details in the Japanese reservations in the proposals.

The third meeting was that of heads of delegations, which is dealt with in the official communiqué.

AMERICAN OPTIMISM.

A particularly optimistic tone is to be found in American delegation circles. Mr. Stimson said to American newspaper men after the meeting of the heads of delegations: "The situation has much improved since last week, and I am much more optimistic of a five-Power agreement now than I was at that time."

The reply of the Japanese Government to the Anglo-American proposals is regarded as very satisfactory in tone and substance, and the Americans are particularly gratified at the manner in which these negotiations have been handled by the Japanese delegation.

JAPAN AND NATIONAL DEFENCE.

NAVY MEMORIAL TO THE EMPEROR.

FROM "THE TIMES" CORRESPONDENT.
TOKYO, Wednesday.

The Japanese Government's hopes that the resistance in naval circles to the Reed-Matsudaira compromise would not be carried to extremes were shattered to-day when Admiral Kanji Kato, Chief of the Naval General Staff, submitted a memorial to the Emperor, to whom his office gives him the right of direct access.

The terms of the memorial are secret, but it is described as offering strong opposition to the Government's policy. To present such a memorial on national defence is the most serious step that any high officer could take.

Its obvious intention is to stir up such opposition to the London plan that the Privy Council will refuse to advise ratification of the treaty.

After returning from the Palace Admiral Kato received the Naval Correspondents of the vernacular newspaper, and declared that the General Staff, which was responsible for national defence, had not changed its opinion that the Reed-Matsudaira plan left Japan inadequately protected, in view of the American cruiser programme.

PLAN ACCEPTED.

JAPANESE DELEGATION'S STATEMENT.

The following statement was issued by the Japanese delegation shortly after 10.30 last night:—

"The Japanese delegation has transmitted to the Government the compromise plan emerging from the informal conversations between the American, British and Japanese delegations, and has asked for their instructions.

"The reply from Tokio arrived on April 1st, and at a meeting of the three delegations at St. James's Palace at 3.15 on April 2nd Mr. Wakatsuki made a statement that the Japanese Government had accepted the plan with a few reservations, to which sincere consideration by the American and British delegations was requested.

"As to the details of such reservations,

THE MAWSON EXPEDITION.

REJOICINGS IN ADELAIDE.

EXPLORER AND THE COST OF THE WORK.

ADELAIDE, Wednesday.

To-day Adelaide was beflagged, and the public filled the streets in token of welcome to Sir Douglas Mawson and the members of his expedition.

The Lord Mayor held a reception in their honour, which was attended by Lord Stonehaven, the Governor-General, and Senator Daly, representing the Federal Government, who said that the Government was looking forward to a second season's work on the part of the expedition, as Australia realised the great value of the work already accomplished.

EXPLORER AND THE WORK.

Sir Douglas Mawson, replying, said that the original programme was to have occupied two years in its execution, but in the present unfortunate circumstance in Australia continuation was difficult. Yet the cost of completing the work would be small, and in another season that expedition could double or triple what it had done in the past five months. It remained to be seen whether the project was of sufficient value to Australia to be worth prosecuting.

There was, he asserted, no gain in the expedition for any man. A Polar expedition offered no monetary reward to those who took part in it. When Scott was dying he had to appeal for funds to settle the debts of the last expedition, and Shackleton was always in debt.

COST OF LAST TRIP.

Sir Douglas Mawson said that he himself had struggled for ten years to clear the accounts of his last trip to the Antarctic, and everything that he had brought back, including every foot of the film, went to pay a £5,000 debt.

FREE STATE AIR CORPS.

SEVEN NEW AEROPLANES.

It is stated authoritatively that the seven new aeroplanes purchased for the Irish Free State Army Air Corps have now been delivered by the makers, and six of them are on their way to Dublin. They were purchased before the end of the financial year.

A short time ago Commandant G. Carroll, the Officer Commanding the Air Corps, went to England with some other officers to test the machines before taking them over. These tests, it is said, have proved satisfactory.

One of the machines, an Avro two-seater training aeroplane, arrived at Baldonnel Aerodrome last Sunday week.

The other six are now flying to Ireland by stages. Three of them are Avros and three are Vickers Vespas.

The Avro type are two-seater training machines, fitted with 130 horse-power Armstrong-Siddeley engines, capable of a speed of 110 miles an hour. The larger machines are fitted with 460 horse-power Armstrong-Siddeley engines, capable of a speed of 140 miles an hour.

AIRMAN BURNED TO DEATH.

TWO DROWNED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
PARIS, Wednesday.

Two tragic aeroplane accidents are reported to-night. A message from Lyons states that a military aeroplane crashed near there in flames, and that one of the occupants was burnt to death. The other escaped with only slight injuries.

At Perpignan a seaplane fell into the sea about five hundred yards from the coast, and it is feared that both the pilot and passenger were drowned.

NATIONAL DEFENCE.

"It is a fact that, the subject matter of the negotiations being related to the question of national defence, there has been difficulty in arriving at an understanding between the three delegations; but the Japanese Government have always approached the matter with a firm resolve to co-operate with the participating Powers to make the Conference a success out of their sincere desire to promote international peace and good-will.

"In view of the fact that the present plan has grown out of the spirit of accommodation and conciliation of the representatives of the Powers concerned, the Japanese Government have come to agree to make it the basis of the treaty to be concluded.

JAPAN'S CLAIM.

"In doing so the Japanese Government have also in mind the fact that the treaty to be concluded will be enforced up to the end of 1936, and that as to the arrangement thereafter all nations concerned will be free to claim all that they deem necessary, and Japan will naturally be in a position to maintain the claim which she considers to be necessary from the point of view of national defence as heretofore."

ARTICLE SIXTEEN.

QUESTION OF AMENDMENT.

Mr. Snowden, replying for the Prime Minister, in the House of Commons yesterday, told Captain Eden (Conservative, Warwick and Leamington) that the interpretation of Article 16 of the Covenant of the League of Nations was under discussion by the delegations to the Five-Power Naval Conference, but no proposal for its amendment had been made.

Mr. Snowden referred to replies given on Tuesday by the Prime Minister to the effect that the British Government had no intention of entering into any commitments which went beyond the Covenant.

Colonel Wedgwood (Labour, Newcastle-under-Lyne) — Does that mean the Covenant as it is, or as it may be when modified?

Mr. Snowden—As I indicated in the first part of my reply, there is no proposal under consideration for the amendment of the Covenant.

Sir Austen Chamberlain—Has there not been a Committee sitting, on which Lord Cecil represents the British Government, for the purpose of considering amendments to the Covenant? Would his answer apply to the Covenant as amended?

Mr. Snowden—I gathered that the question referred to conversations going on in London, and, of course, it does not prejudice discussions which may go on at the League of Nations for the amendment of the Covenant.

AIRCRAFT.

Mr. Hall, in reply to Mr. Ross (Conservative, Londonderry), who asked whether any limitation of aircraft was contemplated, said that the limitation of the tonnage of aircraft-carriers automatically limited the number of carrier-borne aircraft that could be employed, but no limitation of the shore-based aircraft was contemplated at the present Naval Conference.

LATE NEWS.

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH "THE TIMES."

MR. COSGRAVE'S RETURN.

THE HONOURS OF THE DEBATE.

Mr. Cosgrave's position is secure, remarks The Times of to-day editorially. His re-election was expected last Friday, when the news of his resignation was first known. It became certain on Monday night, when Mr. Davin, the Labour M.P. for Leix and Offaly, and a prominent member of his party, made it quite clear in a speech at Malahide that, little as his colleagues loved the Ministerialists, they would not support a Republican candidate. Mr. Davin pointed out that the declared intentions of the Republican Party towards the Anglo-Irish Treaty and the institutions set up under that Treaty had caused a general uneasiness and uncertainty which had kept Mr. Cosgrave in power. The Irish Labour Party, which had accepted the Treaty without equivocation, would not vote for Mr. de Valera while he continued to subordinate every other political issue to the removal of all the obligations imposed by the Treaty and accepted by a majority of the Dáil.

This sensible speech appears to have taken the Republicans by surprise. Mr. Sean Lemass, Mr. de Valera's ablest lieutenant, and, perhaps, his future supplanter, who was said to have described the idea of a Labour Government of the Free State as "ludicrous," and Mr. O'Kelly, who leads the Republicans in his chief's absence, seem to have counted on the willingness of the Labour Party to jettison their convictions in return for Republican smiles, and, perhaps, for a seat in a Coalition Ministry. They treated Mr. Davin's speech as a declaration of war.

Yesterday Mr. O'Kelly announced that his party would not support the candidature to the Presidency of the Executive of Mr. O'Connell, the leader of the Parliamentary Labour Party, and thus practically assured Mr. Cosgrave's re-election by the Ministerialists of the Cumann na nGaedheal, their allies of the Farmers' Party and the majority of the Independents.

CHANCE GONE.

These utterances, no doubt, deprived last night's debate in the Dail of excitement. It was clear that Mr. de Valera's chance was gone, and that there was no likelihood that Mr. O'Connell would be supported by more than the votes of his own party. But the speeches and the voting were of interest. Mr. O'Kelly's panegyric of Mr. de Valera's powers of leadership must have surprised those who remembered the Republican leader's confession of impotence during the later stages of the Irish civil war, and drew no recruits from the Independent benches.

The leader of the Labour Party made his position clear in an able speech, in which he made it plain that his party regarded the Dail not only as a de facto, but as a de jure representative body, and accepted the Treaty as "an irreducible minimum." It would support no President who did not accept the authority of the Dail without question or reservation, and did not accept the Treaty unequivocally.

Mr. Redmond, repenting of his brief support of the Republicans, which temporarily wrecked his National League Party, joined in the attack, and Mr. de Valera's candidature was eventually defeated by an unexpectedly large majority, in which Labour, with one exception, joined the Farmers, Independents and Ministerialists in registering what was in effect a vote for the Treaty.

The subsequent proceedings were less interesting. On the ground that they saw no difference between Labour and the Ministerialist pro-Treatyies, the Republicans refused to vote for Mr. O'Connell, whose candidature was, of course, heavily defeated, and Mr. Cosgrave's return to power was assured.

But the honours of the debate remained with the Irish Labour Party, which has shown a respect for constitutionalism and a common-sense which promise well for its political future.

THE CRUSADE AGAINST RELIGION.

PRIMATE'S STRONG CASE.

The Times to-day, in a leading article on the Archbishop of Canterbury's speech in the House of Lords on the persecution of religion in Russia, observes:—For all the studied moderation with which the Primate stated the result of his investigation, the picture which he drew of conditions in Russia made a profound impression on those who heard it, and will make an equally profound impression on the country. The real horror of those conditions is not the prevalence of physical violence and oppression, the instances of which, numerous and dreadful as they have been, are only incidental to the campaign. What is fundamental, and admits of no doubt, is that the whole power of the Government and of the Communist Party organisation, of which the official Goset is only one of the organs, is being used systematically and ruthlessly for the extirpation of religion. All corporate life of the Churches is suppressed, all common religious teaching of children and young people is forbidden, the machinery of the State schools and universities is perverted to the inculcation of a rabid and fanatical atheism. Ministers of religion, not only of the Christian religion, but Jews and Mohammedans as well, are disfranchised, with all the penalties that disfranchisement entails in Russia, and are exposed to exile and imprisonment without trial whenever the local authorities can find, or invent, a plausible pretext. Almost the only religious freedom that survives is that believers are allowed to conduct Services in the places of worship that still remain to them—and almost every day the Russian Press announces the seizure of churches, synagogues and mosques, and their conversion to other uses.

DIFFICULTIES RECOGNISED.

The Primate, who was scrupulous to avoid anything that might even savour of political controversy, recognised the difficulties of our own Government in the matter, and admitted that it was for the Government itself to decide at what time and in what way and within what limits representations might be made. He himself made a direct appeal to the Soviet Government, making certain concrete suggestions which might be adopted without any departure from its political and economic policy, and which, if adopted, would be a welcome sign of a change of spirit. In spite of their creed of world-wide revolution, the Communist leaders showed, he said, some desire to be on friendly terms with other countries, and they could not have it both ways.

Lord Parmoor, who replied on behalf of the Government, did not attempt to deny the essential accuracy of Dr. Lang's description of the situation, but he held out little hope that any improvement could be secured by diplomatic representations, and he was insistent on the Government's determination not to break off relations with Russia. But the helplessness of the Leader of the House, and the curiously perverted view put forward by Lord Ponsonby served only to throw the Archbishop's case into stronger relief. The effect both of his inquiry and of his powerful statement of its results must be to dissipate the last lingering doubt that may have existed anywhere of the reality of the persecution that the Soviet Government is conducting against every form of religion. It is a persecution so widespread, so systematic, and so ruthless that many have refused to believe in it. Now that such scepticism is no longer possible, public opinion will be clear and united in its detestation. And if the Soviet Government really desires satisfactory relations with this country it will have to pay some heed to that opinion sooner or later.

PERSECUTION O RELIGION.

ENGLISH PRIMATE'S INDICTMENT.

APPEAL TO THE GOVERNMENT.

LORD PARMOOR'S REPLY.

An interested audience followed the Archbishop of Canterbury's statement on the Soviet Government's persecution of religion in the House of Lords last night.

There were many Peeresses in the Gallery reserved for them. Members of the House of Commons were present in large numbers, and in the well-filled Strangers' Gallery were several clergy, including the Rev. N. Behr, Rector of St. Phillip's, the Russian Church, in Buckingham Palace road.

The Archbishop of Canterbury prefaced his speech with a reference to his undertaking to make an inquiry, and an examination of the Russian Constitution. It is a matter so grave, he said, that it should be kept outside all party controversies, and I hope that that will be the desire of any who take part in any discussion that may follow.

It seems impossible, he continued, to expect any satisfactory report from our Embassy at Moscow. There are diplomatic difficulties in the way. I think I shall be able to prove that in Russia there is still deliberate, systematic and persistent oppression of religious feeling. The aim of the Communist organisation which controlled the policy of the Russian Soviet Government, he added, was to create a new world upon the ruins of the old. This involved an attempt to uproot the belief in God. The campaign in progress was directed against every form of Theistic religion. It had been truly said that for twelve years we had witnessed in Russia a long struggle for the soul of the people.

THE VOICE AND THE HAND.

The Primate expressed doubts of the genuineness of the document purporting to have been signed by the Metropolitan Sergius, denying the reality of religious persecution. The voice is the voice of Jacob, he said, but the hand is the hand of Esau. He maintained that the corporate life of the Church had been destroyed, anti-religious propaganda was rife in schools, and children were compelled to profess disbelief in God. A hungry child was told to pray to God for bread; none came. The teacher then told the child to pray to Lenin, and a portion of bread was at once put in the child's hand.

Actual instances of cruelty and oppression were difficult to obtain, but beyond doubt professors of religion had been treated with injustice and severity that would be intolerable in any civilised country. Out of twenty cases he had read from the Soviet Press, seventy-one persons had been sentenced to be shot, and 112 to imprisonment for periods of from two to ten years.

A PATHETIC LETTER.

The Primate read a letter written by a simple village girl in Russia to an exile. She wrote:—

"Happy those who died before, and did not see the ignominy, desolation and persecution of us poor peasants. We are terrified; we tremble like a leaf in autumn. Life has lost for us all its charm."

What was to be done? He noted that Stalin's call to moderation was issued on the eve of the week of prayer [illegible] oppressed. If Russia was disposed to listen to what the world thought, he would ask the Government to press the open door. Sooner or later, he said, some representations must be made. We cannot go on indefinitely, merely scraping some facilities for trade, and paying no heed to these offences against civilisation. It would be bartering for a mess of potage the birthright of those principles for which this nation has desired to stand among the nations of the world. The idea that criticism of religious policy implies any threat of war is a grotesque exercise of the Soviet imagination. If diplomatic relations are to remain satisfactory, our Government must pay some heed to the religious opinion in this country.

In conclusion, he said: We cannot ask the Soviet to change its attitude towards religion. We have a right to ask that in pursuing it they should pay some heed to the claims of justice. They cannot be in friendly relations and flout the principles on which the comity of nations rests.

The Primate resumed his seat, after having spoken for exactly an hour.

MINISTER'S REPLY.

Lord Parmoor, President of the Council, said that there was no doubt that since 1928 there had been religious persecution in Russia. He was glad, however, that the Primate had acknowledged that there had been some improvement. The Government was prepared, when possible or compatible with the interests of those affected, to use all its influence in support of the cause of religious liberty and the freedom of religious practice. He agreed that it was difficult to obtain anything like real accuracy as to the extent of the closing of churches. With regard to the separation of the schools from the State in Russia, lamentable as it was, there had been in other countries considerable and acute differences of opinion as to the rights of the State and the parent in directing the religious education of the children. Surely, he added warmly, the attitude of any State towards education is purely an internal concern of each Government, and no representations on such an issue could, I think, be justified.

TWO CONDITIONS.

All detested systematic denial of religious tolerance, but the Government could not rightly act in such a case unless two very important conditions were satisfied. The Government would have to have accurate proof that the wrongs were being committed, and that they were so grave in character as to become the concern of the whole civilised world. The principle that one country should not seek to interfere in the internal affairs of another was not a mere matter of diplomatic propriety, or a convenient excuse for doing nothing. Secondly, the Government would have to have good reason to hope that its action ld alleviate such wrongs, or, at least, ld not do more harm than good. Any influence that one country might be le to exert upon another in a matter of s kind could only be exerted if endly relations were maintained. The ints raised by the Primate would be carefully considered by the Foreign Secretary and the Foreign Office. If friendly relations could be maintained, he thought that there was at least a chance of influencing the Soviet Government and the Russian people against religious persecution.

Viscount Brentford maintained that the Archbishop's statistics were overwhelming and accurate.

Lord Buckmaster said that if all that the Primate desired was to express our abhorrence at what had taken place, he was with him, but when it was sought to have our influence enforced in some manner by political action, surely we were on doubtful and dangerous ground.

Lord Newton contended that there had been a tremendous recrudescence of religious persecution in Russia during the past two months.

Lord Ponsonby said that he did not think from the debate that there was a demand for a formal protest on the part of the Government. I believe, he said, that this debate will be hotly resented. I do not think that it will do anything to mitigate prosecution. I think it will make Mr. Henderson's task in pursuing relations, and in coming to an agreement, more difficult.

The Archbishop of Canterbury said that, apart from the statistics of actual executions, he thought that the wanton way in which the principles of justice were set aside constituted in itself a wrong which entitled a Government to make friendly remonstrances.

The House rose at 7.5 p.m.

YESTERDAY IN THE SENATE.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE.

POSITION OF MIGRATORY LABOURERS.

Mr. WESTROPP-BENNETT, Chairman, presided at the meeting of the Free State Senate yesterday.

The CHAIRMAN said that he thought that owing to the necessity for Ministers to remain in the Dail that afternoon it would be better to postpone consideraton of the Agricultural Produce (Fresh Meat) Bill (report stage); the report stage of the Military Service Pensions Bill, the report stage of the State Lands (Workhouses) Bill, the report stage of the Illegitimate Children (Affiliation Orders) Bill, for a week.

Mr. MacKEAN thought that they ought to proceed with the business on the Order Paper, irrespective of what was going on at that moment in the other House.

The House agreed to the Chairman's suggestion.

Mr. DOUGLAS moved the second reading of the Shop Hours (Drapery Trades, Dublin and Districts) Bill. He said that it was a bill of one clause, the purpose of which was the extension of the Shop Hours Act of 1926 for three and a half years. There was a strong opinion among the members of the drapery trade and others in Dublin that the existing Act should not be allowed to die out in July next.

The second reading was passed.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE.

Mr. MacELLIN moved: "That is is expedient that a Joint Committee of the Seanad and the Dail be set up to investigate the hardships inflicted on Irish migratory labourers consequent on the fact that they cannot draw unemployment insurance benefit in Ireland in respect of contributions paid on their behalf while in Great Britain, and to report on the most suitable methods to alleviate these hardships. That seven senators represent the Seanad on the said Joint Committee."

He said that the trouble in regard to the payment of benefits to Irish migratory labourers began in 1922, but benefits were paid up to 1924. Then an agreement arrived at with the British Government in 1923 was broken by that Government, which refused to pay further benefits.

There were about fourteen thousand Irish migratory labourers, more than one-third of whom came from the County Mayo, and these contributed about £17,700 a year in stamps while they worked in England and Scotland. The British Government, finding that under the agreement of 1923 they would be paying more than the home Government, broke the agreement. The home Government had always shown good faith in its transactions with the British, which now acted deliberately in refusing to meet its obligations.

This was a matter which should be considered by a joint committee of both Houses, but he had little hope of a reciprocal arrangement between the two Governments. The labourers concerned were the backbone of the country and the soul of the Gaeltacht.

Mr. COMYN seconded the motion. He said that the migratory labourers paid on two cards—one in respect of national health insurance and the other in respect of unemployment insurance. The contribution of the individual was one shilling and one penny per week. If the matter were taken up in this way he had not the smallest doubt that justice would be done as between this country and the societies on the other side.

NO GROUND FOR INQUIRY.

Mr. FARREN said that the Labour Party had been working at this matter since 1923. He thought that the motion should be amended to include "workers." It would then cover both skilled workers and agricultural labourers.

Mr. MILROY said, in opposing the motion, that Senator MacEllin did not seem to realise that in this matter of unemployment insurance there was no common pool between the two countries. There were two distinct funds. He held that there was no ground for an investigation. The ascertained facts were all there as to the degree of hardships to which these people were subject. He did not think this question could be solved until it was eventually submitted to some sort of international convention. He thought it was foolish for the Senate to commit itself to the appointment of a committee which would be useless. It was rather a matter for negotiation between Governments. He thought that all was being done that could be done to bring about a satisfactory solution of this question.

Mr. MacLOUGHLIN said that this motion did not affect ninety-seven per cent. of the Irish migratory labour, only three per cent. of whom paid unemployment contributions. He thought that the motion had been drawn up under an entire misapprehension of the situation.

Mr. COUNIHAN suggested that the motion should be withdrawn and put down in an amended form, to be dealt with at the next meeting of the Senate.

Mr. DOUGLAS said that the motion in its present form would very likely not be accepted by the Dail, and, therefore, it would fail in its chief purpose.

Mr. O'FARRELL suggested an alteration in the terms of the motion to the following effect:—"That it is expedient that a Joint Committee of the Senate and Dail be appointed to consider the hardships inflicted on Saorstat Eireann workers owing to the fact that they are not paid insurance benefit in Saorstat Eireann in respect of contributions paid on their behalf while in Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and to report on suitable methods of remedying these hardships."

Mr. MacELLIN accepted the proposed amendment, but finally the motion was withdrawn, on the understanding that it would be brought up in an amended form, not necessarily with the alteration suggested by Mr. O'Farrell.

The House adjourned until 3 p.m. on Wednesday next, 9th April.

NORTHERN EDUCATION ACT.

The name of the Right Rev. Monsignor Quinn, P.P., V.G., Dean of Dungannon, was inadvertently omitted from the list of the deputation to Lord Charlemont in Belfast Tuesday in connection with the Northern Education Act.

Mr. Eugene Caraher, Portadown, attended a representative Catholic teacher, and not in his capacity as President of the Irish National Teachers' Organisation.

CIVIL SERVICE PENSIONS.

At yesterday's sitting of the Civil Service Compensation Board in Dublin, the following applicants gave evidence:—John Lobar, prison warder, Limerick; William McLaughlin, Sidney Albert Edwards, F.S.I., Valuation Office; and Findlay Kerr.

The Commission will hold another sitting to-day.

MR. COSGRAVE'S RETURN.

if the House gave the Labour Party the opportunity of forming a Government they would see that the Army was the servant of the people, and the servant of any Government appointed by the people. The Labour Party would insist that the laws passed by the representatives of the people in that House were obeyed in the country.

What was the position to-day? On Thursday an important issue called for the resignation of the Government. That vote was being defied by the majority of that House. The President had refused to obey the will of the people as decided by the majority of the House. He put it to the members of the House that if they did not vote for Mr. O'Connell then the only honourable course left was to dissolve and go to the country. If Deputy O'Connell was not elected President, it meant that President Cosgrave would be elected, and that he was not prepared to carry out the wishes of that Parliament. Deputy O'Connell was a man of the people, and any one who had an interest in the welfare of the people would elect him.

GOVERNMENT'S RECORD.

Mr. DAVIN seconded the proposal. What was the use of Ministers going about the country speaking about the independence of the country while they flouted the majority decisions of that House the Irish Times, in a report of last Thursday's proceedings, showed how dependent the Government was on the votes of the Independent group. Striking a balance sheet in order to show what the Government had done, he found on one side that the old age pensions had been cut by one shilling, which meant in reality a reduction of 4s. per week. Then there was the reduction of the Civic Guards' boot allowance, and a cut of 10 per cent. in teachers' salaries.

On the opposite side of the account they proceeded to hand over to the British Government, by way of the financial settlement in connection with property compensation, the sum of about £400,000. That was the gesture of friendship by which it was hoped to get the support of the moneyed classes. Then there was a reduction in income tax and excess profits. They had also sought to reduce the power of the Comptroller and Auditor-General in the case of Army pensions, on which a sum of £216,000 over the amount voted by the House had been paid. There was also a sum of £3,000 granted to the Royal Irish Automobile Club to hold motor races in the Park, and the money for a high-power broadcasting station.

THE INDEPENDENTS.

If Deputy O'Connell were elected, he would bring them away from the period of the civil war, and would govern the country in accordance with the wishes of the plain people of the country. The Cumann na nGaedheal Party had responded to the demands of Deputies Good and Thrift, and those for whom they spoke. The Irish Times had pointed out that the Government owed a great debt to the Independent members, who represented seven per cent. of the people. Those members got more of the things to which the Irish Times said they were entitled than the minority in Northern Ireland. It might be said that the Government had set out to work for the benefit of landowners, slum-owners, and gombeenmen.

NOT TAKEN SERIOUSLY.

Mr. LEMASS (F.F., Dublin S.) said that Fianna Fail had not been able to bring itself to take the proposal to nominate Deputy O'Connell as President seriously. That a party of thirteen members should aspire to form a Government in a House of 153 members seemed to them to be ridiculous. Such a Government would be unable to follow any independent policy, and would be at the beck and call of Cumann na nGaedheal, which controlled the majority in the House. It was a matter of indifference to them whether Cumann na nGaedheal openly, through President Cosgrave, or indirectly, through Deputy O'Connell, governed. Personally, he would prefer the former. Fianna Fail, therefore, proposed to take no part in the present discussion or division.

After Deputy Lemass's speech quite a large number of Fianna Fail deputies left the Chamber.

Captain REDMOND (National League, Waterford), in opposing the motion, explained that, now that the Public Safety Act had been repealed, he believed that the only party that could successfully constitute a Government in that House was the party which had the largest number and could carry the majority in the House. He felt that, as an independent member, he could support that Government now. His main opposition to the Cumann na nGaedheal Government in 1927 was that they had introduced the Public Safety Act, and now that that measure had been withdrawn, he was at one with President Cosgrave, and would support him if, and when, he was nominated for the position later in the evening.

MR. BLYTHE AND LABOUR.

Mr. BLYTHE, Minister for Finance, said that he could hardly conceive any circumstances in which it would be justifiable to entrust the formation of a Government to a party as small as the Labour Party now was. There were eleven departments of State, and two sub-departments requiring parliamentary heads—the Land Commission and Board of Works. It was, therefore, necessary, apart altogether from the question of the Whip, to have thirteen members in the Government. There were just thirteen members of the Labour Party, so that they would be all generals, and no rank and file. (Laughter.) All the members of the Labour Party would be Ministers.

Even if they were to spend two or three days voting on various propositions and failing to elect a President, he believed it would still be undesirable to elect Deputy O'Connell, unless he was in a position to show that he had promises of support from outside groups which would give him rank and file supporters in the House.

LABOUR AND MR. BLYTHE.

Mr. MURPHY (Labour, Cork Boro'), supporting the motion, said that Mr. Blythe was a tinpot Bismarck, who, in his best jack-boot policy, on Sunday last referred to the Labour Party as a jellyfish party. When the Minister was on his trial by the British for his connection with certain phases of the national movement his statement in his own defence was about the greatest exhibition of the jellyfish mentality that ever the annals of that movement contained.

Mr. BLYTHE—I contradict that.

Mr. MURPHY—Can the Minister quote the statement?

The SPEAKER—That statement has nothing to do with this debate.

Mr. MURPHY—I am endeavouring to reply to the lying charges that have been made about the incapacity of Labour. Perhaps it was inconvenient to remind the Minister of statements that were made at the time in hectic newspaper articles, and speeches which, reaching less cautious people, encouraged them to do what the Minister was careful not to do.

LIKE A COMIC OPERA.

Mr. CORRY (F.F., Cork E.) compared the proceedings with a comic opera. The thirteen Labour deputies thought themselves fit to govern all the rest of the House.

Mr. HASLETT (Independent, Monaghan) said that since he came into the House the Independent group had neither asked for nor received any sap from the Government. The suggestion came very badly from a party which had got many benefits from the Government. If Deputy O'Connell were elected President, the Government that he would form would be gone in the twenty-fifth hour. His election would not lead anywhere, and any Government that he would form would not be able to deliver the goods.

Mr. COONEY (F.F., N. Dublin) described the nomination as a huge joke. The Labour Party had neither intellectual ability nor national outlook sufficient to win his party's support.

LABOUR REPLIES.

Mr. MORRISSEY, concluding the debate, said that as boys in the country, when they went to a circus, it was usual for the clowns to come on at the tail end of the show. That, he took it, would explain why Deputies Cooney and Corry intervened in that debate.

Mr. LEMASS—Is the expression Deputy Morrissey used a parliamentary expression?

Professor THRIFT (Dublin University), who was in the Chair, did not consider the expression a parliamentary one.

Mr. MORRISSEY at once withdrew.

Mr. MORRISSEY, referring to a Fianna Fail statement, that if the Labour Party were sincere they would have put more candidates forward at the last election, said that they would have put forward a sufficient number of candidates if they were prepared to go to the same sources for revenue which enabled the Fianna Fail Party to put forward the number of candidates that they did.

Mr. AIKEN (F.F., Louth)—From British trade unionists.

Mr. MORRISSEY—We got no money from them, I am sorry to say, but we would have been glad to get it. We would accept it from fellow-trade unionists in England or any other country, but we did not ask Irish servant boys and girls for it.

Mr. LEMASS—Irish servant boys and girls are not good enough.

Mr. O'CONNELL—Not good enough to be imposed upon.

Mr. DAVIN—They don't like their own medicine.

Mr. MORRISSEY went on to say that there were questions, social and economic, that members could agree on, and if they had a Labour Government they would come together.

THE DIVISION.

On a division, the motion was defeated by 78 votes to 13.

FOR MR. COSGRAVE'S RE-ELECTION.

MAJORITY OF FIFTEEN SECURED.

Mr. MONGAN (Govt., Galway), speaking in Irish, proposed the nomination of Deputy Cosgrave, whose name, he said, was held in high esteem throughout the country ever since the first Dail was established. He had proved his worth by action. Seven years ago he was elected as President of the Executive Council, when the ship of State was in rough and stormy waters. Now that the ship had reached comparatively calm waters certain people were endeavouring to take the helm from him. There were still dangerous rocks ahead, and if they had not an experienced captain they would inevitably find themselves in danger. For that reason it would be wrong to change the captain until the ship was safe and sound in the harbour.

Every time that Deputy Cosgrave had appealed to the country he had been returned triumphantly, and if he were to go to the country to-morrow he would return with a much increased majority. When the people read in the papers next morning that the former President had been re-elected they would be jubilant, because a better man than Liam Mac Cosgair they could not get. (Applause.)

Mr. DAVIS (Govt., Mayo, N.) formally seconded the motion.

Mr. MacENTEE (F.F., Dublin Co.) said that the late Government had deliberately turned its back upon the arguments of the late Arthur Griffith and General Collins that the Treaty was a means to freedom. They now had an authoritative declaration upon the part of one of the deputy's colleagues that the trend was not towards a Republic, but towards a closer association with the British Commonwealth of Nations.

THE PROTESTANT SUCCESSION.

Under the report of the Imperial Conference, the occupant of the throne of the Irish Free State must be a Protestant and in communion with the Church of England.

The DEPUTY SPEAKER said the deputy could not discuss that report on this motion.

Mr. MacENTEE submitted that he was entitled to show that the present policy of Deputy Cosgrave and Cumann na nGaedheal was to preserve the Protestant succession in this country—the King, the Constitution, and the Protestant succession, which happened also to be the fundamental principles of the Orange Institution.

He asked the House to consider the economic effects of the passing of this motion. The House passed the Old Age Pensions Bill. If they voted for Deputy Cosgrave they would throw their previous vote to the winds, and accelerate the economic stagnation and decay.

He would like to know if President Cosgrave intended to follow the dictum laid down by the Minister for Defence—that the Irish people had not the right to elect Mr. de Valera. Because the Government had failed in their primary function, the preservation of the social order, he asked the House to reject the motion.

AN ANNUAL EVENT.

Mr. O'HANLON (Indpt., Cavan) said that for the past six or seven weeks there had been rumours that a political crisis would be precipitated before Easter. That crisis had been the defeat of the Ministry last Thursday on the Old Age Pensions Bill. In his (Mr. O'Hanlon's) opinion this crisis was deliberately brought about. He had voted in favour of the bill last Thursday, and he was not going to stultify himself by voting for the return to office of the ex-President. He believed that the whole proceedings that day had been staged for a reason best known to the Government.

Mr. CASSIDY (Lab., Donegal) said that there had been too much mud-slinging in the speeches that they had heard that day. He opposed the nomination of Mr. Cosgrave, one reason for that being that many of the laws that were passed by the Dail during the life of the Government were passed, not in the interests of the bulk of the people, but in the interests of the wealthy portion of the community, and to the detriment of the poorer classes.

Dr. WARD (F.F., Monaghan) said that Deputy Cosgrave apparently wished to slip out of a side door, and not give effect to the decision of the majority of the House in regard to old age pensions. If the Deputies who voted for the bill last week voted for this motion it would be apparent, even to the blind, that they had very little interest in the old age pensioners.

SOLID GROUND.

Mr. MULCAHY, Minister for Local Government, said that the Government was going to put the feet of the country down on solid financial ground. They had a limited amount of money to spend on the social services of the country, and they were not prepared to spend an additional £300,000 on old age pensions. The Opposition were offered an opportunity to set up a Government, and he thought that the majority of the House would come to the conclusion that they were not prepared to do that. He doubted that, even if Fianna Fail got a majority, they would be prepared to give £300,000 additional to old age pensioners. This talk about sovereignty and all the flag-waving would not bring them down to constructive work, and would not achieve the things that they desired.

Mr. DERRIG (F.F., Carlow-Kilkenny) said that the speeches of Ministers had shown that they were absolutely out of touch with the situation in the country in the matter of old age pensions.

NO ALTERNATIVE.

Mr. MURPHY (Indept., Dublin Co.) said that there was now no alternative but to elect President Cosgrave, and it was a waste of time making speeches.

Mr. O'KELLY asked if the Government had definitely thrown over, so far as it could, the old ideal of the Irish people for absolute separation from England. Were they now standing for separation? Deputy Cosgrave was once strongly in favour of separation from England. So was the Minister for Finance, but in his case a change might be regarded as atavism. The Minister for Local Government had also been a strong supporter of the separation policy, but had described his party as flag-waggers.

Fianna Fail had just as many voters in the country as those who sat opposite, but Cumann na nGaedheal would not be in power again unless it got the support of the gentlemen in the centre of the House who stood for the Union Jack, and which the Irish Times said that it needed. The Irish Times had reminded Cumann na nGaedheal of its miserable position as a Government—its subordinate position in that House as a Government. It was a case of the tail wagging the dog, the tail being the Independent members. If the Government did anything against the party which the Irish Times spoke for, it would know where it was. The Irish Times had referred to the need of new relations between the Government and the Independent members, to which it owed a debt.

Mr. SHEEHY (Government, Cork, W.)—I am surprised to see the deputy pinning his faith to the Irish Times. (Laughter.)

Mr. O'KELLY said that he was not pinning his faith to the Irish Times, to which he had always been opposed.

A NICE JOB.

Mr. SHEEHY said that he always did his duty, and had never got a job, such as being sent to Paris like Deputy O'Kelly.

Mr. O'KELLY said that it took a fit man to go to Paris to represent the Irish Republic, and if a better man could be found he would have been sent. With regard to the Government policy, the Irish Times cracked the whip, the Independents paid the piper, and the Government played the tune. During the past eight years they had paid to the British Government, without any legal obligation, £36,000,000. This was made up of—Land annuities, £25,000,000; pensions for civil officers who had retired prior to the Treaty, £1,101,000; pensions for R.I.C., £9,382,000. Still they could not restore what had been taken off the old age pensioners.

LABOUR VIEW.

Mr. O'CONNELL (Labour) said that when Deputy Cosgrave was proposed as head of the Executive Council in June, 1927, and again in September, 1927, the Labour Party had opposed his nomination, and nothing had passed since that gave them any reason to change the opinions that they then held. They proposed to vote against the nomination of Deputy Cosgrave as President.

Continuing, Mr. O'Connell said that his main objection to the present administration was that no real effort had ever been made to tackle the social evils which they were all agreed existed. Anything that had been done had been patchwork. The House should have some indication as to whether the Government intended to continue their hand to mouth policy in economic affairs or whether they intended to tackle seriously and deliberately the question of organising the country's resources so that they could make the land really worth living in.

Dr. O'HIGGINS (Govt., Dublin, N.), supporting the motion, said that the strength of Deputy Cosgrave's claim to a further vote of confidence in his administration depended, not on words and formulæ, but on solid achievement. The evidence of that achievement was to be seen in that House, in their cities and towns, and in a drive through the country.

Mr. LEMASS said that the record of the Government had been one of failure to deal with unemployment, with emigration, and with the housing problem, and for that reason the House would be well advised to reject the motion before it. Mr. Blythe said that, if the land annuities were not paid to England, the English Government would put a duty of £1 per head on cattle imported from Ireland. What authority had the Minister for saying that? Was it not a suggestion to the British to impose such a duty if the Fianna Fail Party took the reins of Government? The greatest mistake the House could make would be to re-elect Mr. Cosgrave.

MANY INVENTIONS.

Professor O'SULLIVAN said that every morning when he woke he asked himself what new policy Mr. Lemass would propose, so numerous were his schemes. Mr. Cosgrave had been called to look after the destinies of this country in a time of trouble, and there were few people in any country who could have faced the task before him more courageously than their President had done or with as much success. (Hear, hear.)

The President had difficult tasks to perform during the last eight years. Measures that were now accepted by everybody when they were introduced by the Government received nothing but criticism from the Opposition, who, notwithstanding, acknowledged that the schemes were good.

On a division the motion to nominate Mr. Cosgrave was carried by 80 votes to 65.

The result was received with loud applause in the Government.

Fianna Fail—Deputies de Valera and J. J. Killane (Longford-Westmeath).

Independent—Deputy J. F. O'Hanlon (Cavan).

President COSGRAVE returned thanks for the great honour that had been conferred on him, and said that he proposed with the help of God to carry out the duties again imposed on him to the best of his ability. He moved the adjournment of the House until three o'clock to-day (Thursday), and this was carried.

The motion was agreed to, and the House rose.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND RELIGION.

THE DISAPPEARING CLERGY.

The aloofness of the clergy from everyday affairs, their gradual disappearance, and the attitude of young people to-day towards religion were discussed by Mr. C. E. M. Joad in an address at the annual Congress of the National Union of Students at Cambridge yesterday on "The Present and Prospects of Religion." There were, he said, nearly five thousand fewer clergymen in the Church of England in 1928 than in 1921, and, if the present rate of decrease was maintained, they would be an extinct species in England and Wales in thirty years. "Clergymen fiddle while the Church burns," he said. "Churchmen are absorbed in controversies over technical matters of no interest to the layman. Times admittedly are difficult, but when the perplexed citizens of a distracted world seek guidance they are regaled with controversies over reservation and chatter about aumbries."

Science admittedly had no bearing on the spiritual truths of religion, and could have none, and if the present tendencies continued it might probably deliver the coup de grâce to organised Christianity in a hundred years. "To-day," he said, "young men and women are so educated as to find it impossible to accept the old-fashioned view of religion. Whenever they enter a church they are required to leave their intelligences in the porch. The present generation has shown religion to be a fiction. It has still to come to terms with the needs which created the fiction. It has knocked the bottom out of the universe of the Victorians, and dropped their gods through the hole. It has now to fill the vacuum that it has made. It seems unlikely that the present decline in

SCENES IN NORTHERN COMMONS.

ASSERTIONS AND DENIALS.

There were scenes of some heat in the Northern House of Commons yesterday, when the Parliamentary and Local Government Election Bill, the object of which is to put down personation at Parliamentary and local government elections, came up for third reading.

Mr. William Grant (Unionist) expressed the view that all hon. members of the House were seriously desirous of doing away with personation, but on examining some of the speeches of members of the Opposition he thought that some of them did not desire to do away with personation.

Mr. Collins (Nat.) moved the rejection of the bill, as he considered that a bill should have been brought in that would really stop personation. He did not think that the present bill would do so.

Mr. Cahir Healy (Nat.) seconded the rejection of the bill.

I am glad to say that the personation evil is not general, he said, but seems to be confined to the City of Belfast, where you have many churches and send many missions to the heathen, but these heathens know nothing of personation. (Laughter.)

A SCENE.

Mr. Nixon (Ind. Unionist) took exception to certain remarks made by Mr. Grant. He said that while he had respect for a man who had his own views and opinions, he had no respect for a lap-dog.

Mr. Grant (Unionist) interjected a remark, and Mr. Nixon retorted: "I hope I am hitting you, because, if I am, I will withdraw the word 'dog' and substitute 'pup.' Further, I would like the House to understand that I never shot myself to get out of the way."

There were cries of "Oh," and "Withdraw" from the Government benches, and Sir Dawson Bates, Minister of Home Affairs, asked if it was in order for a member to make such a suggestion.

Mr. Grant said that the member who made the remark would be a coward if he did not mention the member's name. "Then," he added, "I will tell the House something."

Mr. Nixon—If the cap fits you, wear it.

Mr. Stewart (Nat.) supported the rejection of the bill.

THE PRIME MINISTER.

Lord Craigavon (Prime Minister) maintained that it was a sincere attempt by the Government to put down a practice which every decent citizen in Northern Ireland deprecated. The bill was founded on a report of a committee which investigated the matter and heard evidence.

The Opposition, he added, were very quick in twitting the Government for not putting into effect the reports of commissions and committees, and now when they did so they were accused of not being honest.

Mr. Stewart said that at a Tyrone-Fermanagh election ten 'bus-loads of personators arrived from the official Unionist headquarters in Belfast.

Mr. Rowley Elliott (U.) denied this, and Mr. Stewart, proceeding, said: "I was told by a Unionist agent that you received no fewer than 60 votes as a result of personation. (Laughter.)

Mr. Elliott said that if he could get the name of the officer who made that statement he would give him an opportunity of defending himself. The Catholic priests interested themselves in the contest, and shepherded the Nationalists to the poll.

Mr. McCarroll (Nat.) said that this was not so. On the contrary, the priests advised their people not to take any part. He had the experience of being personated himself.

MORE HEAT.

Mr. Grant (Unionist) said that he desired to reply to the member for Woodvale (Mr. Nixon), who, when asked to name the member that he referred to, said: "Wear the cap if it fits you." Any child in the street could make that reply, but it was not a manly or honourable one. As he (Mr. Grant) was the only member of the House shot during the trouble he would like to reply to the charge. Going back to 1921 he would remind the member for Woodvale of an afternoon when he called to his (Mr. Grant's) house and said: "You are in great danger of losing your life, and it is absolutely necessary that you should have protection."

Mr. Nixon—I never said anything of the kind. I never would take the member into my confidence to that extent.

Mr. Grant—This actually happened.

Mr. Nixon—I deny it.

The Speaker intervened, but Mr. Grant repeated the statement, and said that the member for Woodvale appointed two men to look after him during that time. That showed that the cap did not fit him.

"I challenge anyone," he declared, "to say I am a coward. During that time I had no salary or pension, but I did one man's job in the City of Belfast, and I was thanked by responsible officers of the Crown for what I did. It is contemptible for any member to make the statement that he did, and I challenge him to prove it. If he does not he is neither a dog nor a pup, but a coward."

This statement was greeted with cheers by the Unionist members, and when Mr. Nixon rose to speak he was met with cries of "No," "No," from the same side of the House.

Mr. Hanna, Parliamentary Secretary, spoke in favour of the bill, and when he had concluded, Mr. Nixon rose again and reiterated his statement, adding that he was never in Mr. Grant's house, although he got as far as the hall once, and was told that Mr. Grant was not in.

THE SPEAKER INTERVENES.

Mr. Grant said he wished to make a personal statement, but the Speaker intervened with the remark, "I think it is best for you two gentlemen to agree to disagree."

Mr. Grant—Then I leave it to the House to judge between our two statements.

Mr. Nixon nodded, and the debate was continued.

The bill was read a third time by 27 votes to 4.

organised religion will be arrested. Christianity, in fact, in its traditional form, will not recover its influence. Mysticism must become the common heritage of the race, instead of the unique privilege of its most favoured children."

A "CARICATURE."

Captain C. W. Hume, of London University, opened the discussion on Mr. Joad's lecture. He said an entertaining caricature of organised Christianity—I do not think we can take it seriously. We admit a decline in Church attendance. Only people go to church now who want to go. Nobody who has not the spirit of martyrdom would become a Church of England clergyman. He has to live on half the "screw" of the ordinary man.

Mr. W. M. Allcroft, an Aberdeen University student, asked Mr. Joad to explain "What is our purpose on this earth. Why do we live so-called moderately respectable lives?" and added—"I cannot believe that religion is merely an insurance taken out on earth against fire in the hereafter."

Mr. Joad's reply was to invite Mr. Allcroft into his study.

Mr. P. J. Shields, of the Royal College of Surgeons, Dublin, declared that "the irreligion of the age is due more to the lack of thought of most of us than to the pursuance of any definite course of thought."

Another striking declaration was that of Dr. Alexander Wood, of the Cavendish Laboratory, Cambridge. Presiding at a meeting arranged by the Student Christian Movement, Dr. Wood said: "Physics, the fundamental and most exact of all the sciences, is going to lead us nowhere in the final exposition of reality and life."

COAL MINES BILL.

QUESTION OF DISTRICT LEVIES.

FROM OUR PARLIAMENTARY CORRESPONDENT.
WESTMINSTER, Wednesday.

When the debate on the Coal Mines Bill was resumed on report in the House of Commons to-day, Colonel Lane Fox moved to omit the sub-section of Clause 3 which gives power to a District Executive Board, subject to the consent of the Central Council, to collect levies upon coal intended for home consumption. The object of the levy, he said, was to facilitate the sale of coal at the cheaper rate for export purposes, and for the special purposes of particular industries. Since the House had struck out the original proposal for a central levy, he did not see why the Government should cling to the district levy with so much determination. It was one of the objectionable provisions in the bill for raising the price against the home consumer.

Sir P. Cunliffe-Lister also characterised the proposition as unsound, inasmuch as it would compel owners to pay a levy simply in order to give an advantage to their competitors.

Mr. W. Graham, in reply, said that he regretted the disappearance of the national levy, and he had already made it clear that this step would raise considerable difficulties in the exporting districts; but he saw no reason why the district levy should not be retained. It had never been intended to export coal at less than the European or world price. The central consideration was that if we could not export coal at that price we should not get the trade. For weighty reasons he was unable to accept the amendment. It would cause grave anomalies in the working of the scheme.

The amendment was rejected by 252 votes to 147.

PRICE OF EXPORT COAL.

Mr Womersley moved an amendment to provide that no moneys raised by the district levy should be applied to facilitate the sale of coal for export at a less price than was charged for such class of coal for bunkering ships.

Sir Robert Chadwick, in supporting the amendment, said that British shipping suffered more from foreign competition than any other industry.

Mr. Graham said that he had already stated his reasons against an amendment of this kind. Unless British coal was sold at European prices they could not expect to get the European trade.

On a division, the amendment was rejected by 271 votes to 165.

The Government, at the instance of Mr. C. Edwards, accepted an amendment limiting the operation of Part one of the bill to two years instead of three, as proposed. The Attorney-General agreed that the bill was an experiment, and thought it only reasonable that the House should be given an opportunity of reviewing the position at the end of 1932.

The report stage was concluded.

After a short discussion on the motion for third reading, the debate was adjourned.

NEWS FROM ALL IRELAND.

PRICE OF PIGS.

At THOMASTOWN (Co. Kilkenny) pig market, 97s. per cwt. was paid for fat pigs—a decrease of 2s. on last week's price.

DEATH AFTER DINNER.

Mr. Thomas Davidson, Ballyneale House, Tullogher, County KILKENNY, an extensive farmer, died suddenly after partaking of his dinner. He was aged 40 years.

NEW RECTOR.

The Bishop of Clogher (the Right Rev. Dr. MacManaway) yesterday instituted the Rev. R. T. Farrell, B.A., curate in charge of Augher parish, as rector of Aghavea parish, BROOKEBOROUGH.

THE MILLING INDUSTRY.

The Cork Corporation resolution, urging the Free State Minister for Industry and Commerce to take such action as might be necessary to prevent the control of the Irish flour milling industry passing outside the State, was adopted by the DROGHEDA Corporation last Tuesday night.

TRANSFER OF LICENCE.

At KILMAINHAM District Court yesterday, before District Justice Reddin, Mr. Albert Woodcock, solicitor, applied for the transfer of the licensed premises known as the Onward Bar, Skerries, from the name of Terence Curtis to that of John Kane. The application was granted.

AT SCHOOL AGAIN.

Viscount Charlemont, Minister of Education in Northern Ireland, has gone back to school. He made this interesting announcement at ANTRIM Technical School prize distribution, when he said: "In order to show my interest in technical education, and in order to see that it is properly done, I am taking lessons in a technical school at the present moment."

KILKENNY SHOW.

KILKENNY Agricultural Society has fixed its annual show for Thursday, September 25th. The Earl of Ossory was re-elected President of the Society; Mr. James Harte, solicitor, Vice-President; Mr. James Muldowney, Secretary; and Messrs. P. F. Byrne, Patrick Kelly and William Hogan, Trustees. The profit on last year's show showed an increase of £81 over the profit on the 1928 show

McCREA-MAGEE COLLEGE.

The closing meeting of the session of McCrea-Magee College, DERRY, was held yesterday in the Common Hall of the College. Before the meeting the students visited the residence of Mr. Thomas Finnegan, M.A., who has been appointed Professor of Ancient Classics, as Dr. MacMask's colleague. They carried him shoulder high to the platform of the Common Hall singing all the way, "For he's a jolly good fellow."

KILKENNY MAN'S DEATH.

The death has occurred of Mr. James Smithwick, Kilcreene Lodge, Kilkenny. He belonged to a family which, for generations, has been prominently associated with the commercial life of the country as the owners of St. Francis Abbey Brewery, of which, since it was converted into a limited company, he was a director. He was a popular supporter of the Kilkenny Hunt. Under the old régime the late Mr. Smithwick was a Justice of the Peace for County Kilkenny.

CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS.

The members of the DUBLIN Society of Chartered Accountants met to hear an account of Mr. G. Brock's impressions of, and experiences at, the International Congress of Accounting, New York, 1929. Mr. Brock, who is hon. secretary of the Institute of Chartered Accountants in Ireland, was one of the Institute's two official delegates to the Congress. The International Congress in New York was the third Congress of its kind, and was attended by upwards of 1,600 delegates from all parts of the world. Mr. Brock said that the most interesting papers read were those which dealt with the subjects of depreciation and balance sheets, and with legislation for the registration of accountants.

MONEY HIDDEN IN PIANO.

An interesting point was raised in a case in DUNDALK Circuit Court yesterday in connection with the estates of the late Thomas V. Parks and his sister, Miss Anne Jane Parks. Mr. Parks was a well-known Irish singer. On his death his sister lived alone in Bridge street. Mr. Roe pointed out that on the death of Miss Parks a sum of £636 was found in the house. Of this £471 was in sovereigns and half-sovereigns, many of which were found hidden in a piano. The remainder consisted of old notes for £10 and £5 which were found hidden in various places—under pictures and in books of music. Applications were made to the Court to declare that the money which had been left by the late Mr. Parks should bear interest during the lifetime of Miss Parks. Judge Devitt made an order for the bearing of interest. There was no reason, he said, why the legatees under the will of the brother of Miss Parks should suffer.

AMERICAN MISSIONARIES SAFE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
WASHINGTON, Wednesday.

The National Catholic Welfare Conference has informed the State Department that eight American Catholic women missionaries in Kanchow (Kansy Province), who were reported to be in danger from Chinese brigands last week, are now in safety.

U.S MARKETS.

STOCKS CLOSE HEAVY.

REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.
NEW YORK, Wednesday.

Following a strong operation, trading continued heavy, with the market showing increasing irregularity. Frequent flurries of selling swept over the market, but new leaders were quickly brought out, and the general level of prices early worked higher. Call money ruled at 4 per cent., at which rate supplies were adequate. The closing was heavy. The "ticker" was thirty-six minutes late.

WAITING CROWDS: CHILD MARRIAGE: LEAGUE OF NATIONS MEETING

THE DAIL NOMINATIONS—Crowds waiting for news outside Government Buildings, Dublin, yesterday, during the debates which preceded the nomination of Mr. William Cosgrave as President of the Executive Council of the Irish Free State.

AN INDIAN CHILD MARRIAGE—During the last few days thousands of Hindu children have been married to evade the new Child Marriage Act. This photograph shows a child-bride's marriage feast in progress. The bridegroom (centre) is offering sweetmeat to the little bride. The marriage feast is the only occasion on which they take their meals together, as afterwards the child wife must wait on her husband, and take her meals when he is finished.

IN FLIGHT—One of four new Vickers Vesper machines which have just been built at Weybridge for the Irish Free State Air Force, and which are to be delivered this week. The wing tips bear the Free State tricolour markings. The machines have attained speeds of 135 m.p.h. at 15,000 feet.

Sir THOMAS MYLES, who has been elected President of the Companions of St. Patrick.

TENNIS FASHIONS—Longer skirts and a return to the blouse-and-skirt fashion is promised for the lawn tennis girl this season. Here are three 1930 girls wearing this season's attire.

INTERNATIONAL CELEBRITY SUBSCRIPTION CONCERTS. Mdlle. Ania Dorfmann, the famous pianist, who will give a recital, with Paul Robeson, at the Theatre Royal, Dublin, on Saturday.

COMING EVENTS—A stage in the manufacture of the cricket ball. Closing the leather case on the "core" of cork, wrapped with worsted. A ton pressure is brought to bear in this process.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS SOCIETY MEETING—A photograph taken at the Mansion House, Dublin, last evening. Included are Dr. Lombard Murphy, the Rev. Stephen Browne, S.J.; Miss B. Stafford, Princess Radziwill, Mr. T. Bodkin, Miss A. O'Farrelly, Senator Douglas, Miss Murphy and Sir Philip Hanson.

Miss Slocock, with the Punchestown Challenge Cup, won by Mr. O. T. V. Slocock's Girtsun at the Kildare Hunt Sportsman's Races yesterday.

BADMINTON—The combined teams of Drogheda and Woodbrook, who met in the final of Section C of the Midland League Competitions. Woodbrook won by 8 matches to love.

A FALL—Mr. Harvey and his mount, Miss Antonio, part company while crossing the last jump in the Kildare Hunt Sporting Farmers' Race, at Punchestown yesterday.

THE TORY ISLAND WRECK—The ss. Wheatplain, with her back broken, lying across the rocks on which she foundered. Her crew were saved, but, owing to the severity of the gales, were marooned on the island for five days.

The happiness of the home in her hands

Eileen knows the way to a man's heart. It's not a romantic way but Eileen is a practical little person and she gets there—which is the main thing.

"Feed the Brute" is a coarse maxim but Eileen makes poetry of it. The little bottle in her hands is a never failing help. A few drops of Yorkshire Relish in her soups and stews and hashes and savouries, and a bottle on the table to bring out the flavour of meat or fish. So simple and so very effective.

Her man does not get tired of fish during Lent because she serves it in so many attractive ways. Here is one of her favourite recipes. Just try it and note how the concentrated and economical thin sauce adds delightful piquancy to the dish.

CREAM OF HAKE. Cook 1½ lbs. hake, drain and remove skin and bone. Mash until quite smooth. Mix with ½ pint white sauce, to which has been added 4 leaves gelatine (dissolved in a little water), a teaspoonful curry powder, one of Yorkshire Relish, pepper and salt. Mix well, turn into mould, and leave till set. Then turn out and arrange round slices of tomato and egg. Serve with salad.

DERBY, Wednesday Night.

A few trainers seem to be establishing a monopoly in race-winning this season. Ever since it began R. J. Colling and Basil Jarvis have been winning races, and the former took one and the latter two events this afternoon. Colling's winner was the Irish filly Contrary Mary, by Cottage, who, starting at a long price and ridden by Rufus Beasley, won the Elvaston Castle Selling Plate by a length and half a length from Uplift and Sandbath. This filly had been well tried, and the stable bought her in after the race for 450 guineas.

Jarvis's winners were Antiquary, an American-bred horse, who took the Quarndon Handicap by two lengths from Grand Flight, and the Papyrus two-year-old Pergamena, who was an unlucky loser at Lincoln, and here won the Sudbury Plate by a neck and three-parts of a length from Tom Tit III. and the Kitty San filly by Stratford. Antiquary, who belongs to Major Courtauld, had been fancied for the Liverpool Cup, in which he disappeared very suddenly after being well up coming to the straight. He had less to do here, and he beat Grandflight by two lengths very easily.

Pergamena is a nice, sharp filly, and she was always just a little too good for the others in her race. There was one fancied for this called The Nile, owned by Sir Victor Sassoon, and, like the winner, a daughter of Papyrus. She ran prominently for about four furlongs, and then was beaten.

ELTON BEATEN OUT OF A PLACE.

The Derbyshire Handicap was easily won by the lightly-weighted five-year-old, Boldero, trained by Charles Waugh for Mr. J. S. Austen. Sartellus led him until they came to the distance, when he went on and beat Mr. Macomber's candidate by two lengths. The first two had the race to themselves all the way. Boldero stays well, and it is not unlikely that he will win a good-class handicap this season. Elton was just beaten out of a place here, and I noticed Pauli running well.

The Welbeck Selling Plate went to Vesington Hero, a five-year-old half-brother to Prince Melton, whom Sir Robert Wilmot has been training for E. G. Goby. After beating Solomon's Choice by a neck he was sold for 280 guineas to go to the United States.

The Belfast owner, Mr. Harry Liddell, won the last race of the afternoon with his Planet gelding, Dusty, who caught the pacemaker, Cebrenus, in the straight, and then resisted a late challenge from Beary on Guilcagh to win cleverly.

SELECTIONS.

The Osmaston Plate here to-morrow should be won by BACKWARD GLANCE. In the Chaddesden Handicap I like best POMERELLIN, and in the Doveridge Handicap PEACE PACT has an each-way chance.

GALTEE MORE.

SHAUN GOILIN.

Mr. M. Fogarty, of Golden, Cashel, County Tipperary, the owner of Golden Day, the dam of Shaun Goilin, writes that the Grand National winner was bred at the Rathduff Stud, Golden, Tipperary, and not in County Limerick, as has been stated. The late Major Edwards was the breeder of the horse, who was a chance foal out of Golden Day, and supposed to be by Shaun Aboo. The latter was by Uncle Mac out of Kendal Lily and Golden Day by Golden Measure out of Mayrush by The Rush. Mr. Fogarty bought Golden Day at the final dispersal sale of the late Major Edwards's bloodstock in 1923 for 55 guineas, and put her to the stud that year. The following are her produce since then:—1924, Golden Strand (by Sir Rowland) who won two races for Mr. J. J. Parkinson and was subsequently exported to the Federated Malay States; 1926, Golden George (by By George!) who was leased to Major Wise; 1927, Gomar (by Marten) who was sold to Sir Thomas Dixon, and is engaged in this year's Baldoyle Derby; 1929, bay filly by Marten. Golden Day was barren in 1925 and 1928, and is now due to foal to Phalara.

SPORTING GOSSIP.

Newmarket Invalids.

On inquiry at Sackville House, Newmarket, last evening it was learnt that Mr. [illegible]ide-Jones, the Jockey Club veterinary surgeon, had not had a very comfortable day, and that he is making no progress during his illness. Mr. A. Hayhoe, the well-known ex-trainer, who has been ill for several weeks, is also very weak, and is stated to be in a very serious condition.

Italian Crack for Ascot Gold Cup.

The Italian racehorse, Ortello, owned by Signor G. De Montel, will be shipped to England during the second half of next month for training in preparation for the Ascot Gold Cup, which will be run on June 19th. Ortello is the four-year-old crack, who last year won many of the principal Italian races, and in France, on the Longchamps course, won the Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe.

DERBY TO-DAY: PROBABLE STARTERS AND BETTING.

PHONEMETER FOR THE DOVERIDGE.

SELECTIONS.

The concluding stage of the Derby fixture has the Doveridge Handicap as its principal attraction. Quartrain will have to be at his best to win with top weight, but he showed good form last season and this fast mile should suit him. Phonemeter had three useful successes to his credit last year, having won the Glasgow Nursery at Doncaster, the First October Nursery at Newmarket, and the Knowsley Nursery at Liverpool. He is very speedy, and he is very much fancied for this. Trembling Grass, better known as the Celsia colt, should not be troubled to stay this distance, but on the Liverpool form Phonemeter should again beat him. Peace Pact should be well suited by this course, as she is exceptionally speedy, and I consider that she is not harshly handicapped. Spilsby and Dungeon may prove the best of the remainder, but summing up between Quartrain, Phonemeter and Trembling Grass I select Phonemeter.

There will be a much bigger field for the Chaddesden Handicap. Possibly the pick of the handicap is Pomerellen, who ran so well when only a short head behind King Baldwin at Lincoln last week. She is just as favourably handicapped here, and I think that she will win. Fifty-50 is to be given another chance, but he ran below expectations at Liverpool, and I do not fancy him on this occasion. Knight of the Vale has yet to earn winning brackets, and he is well handicapped, if not good enough, over this six furlongs. Bibiani is fancied each way, and it will not be forgotten that in his last race last year he defeated a big field at Catterick Bridge. I sum up in favour of Pomerellen.

There will not be a big field for the Drakelow Maiden Plate. St. Leger apparently does not run, and in his absence I take sides with Clotilde de Savoie, with Gordon Richards in the saddle.

POINT-TO-POINT.

THE KILDARE HUNT RACES.

SIXTY RUNNERS.

A few light showers fell yesterday at Punchestown, but they in no way marred the enjoyment of the crowd, which seemed to be larger than ever, and, with an average of ten runners for the six events, there was no lack of briskness about the sport. The races were run over the usual point-to-point course, which was in splendid order, and in the majority of them we had excellent finishes.

The strongest feature was the race for the Punchestown Challenge Cup, the dozen runners for which included the penalised Martini and The Black Fellow. The pair soon singled themselves out from the remainder, and kept close company until about a mile from the end, when Martini came down on the flat. Then The Black Fellow looked all over a winner, but with about three-quarters of a mile to go he took a bad fall, Mr. W. J. Osborne receiving a severe shaking. That left Single Life well clear, but coming to the last fence Mr. O. T. Slocock's Girtsun headed him to win by a couple of lengths.

In the Hunt Sportsman's Race Yea brought the field along at a merry bat for the first circuit, when Mr. R. More O'Ferrall's Rainstown took it up, and, with Yea falling half a mile from home, Rainstown won at his ease from Captain de Burgh's mare, who was quickly remounted.

The dozen runners for the Ladies' Race made a pretty spectacle, with Joy, Minimus, Deskra, Grand Wave, Silvermine, Rodriguez and Punster the leading division in the early stages. After the second last fence Silvermine, Grand Wave, Rodriguez and Punster had it to themselves, but when running second to Silvermine Grand Wave fell at the final obstacle, and Mr. L. F. Ball's mare, who was splendidly ridden by Miss Ball, scored a comparatively easy victory from Rodriguez. Aedie, in the Cobs' Race, took his fences beautifully and won in a canter; and Armigera, who holds a liability in the Farmers' Race at Punchestown, and Clearmount were convincing winners of the Farmers' Races.

GREYHOUND RACING.

NOBLE GRECIAN TO THE FORE AGAIN.

Followers of the money fared none too well last night at Shelbourne Park, as only two first favourites were successful.

The racing throughout was most interesting, and the keenest contest was that for the Shelbourne Stake, which was won by Malavogue after a great finish with Friend In Need. The winner was never favourably placed till nearing the straight, and then, coming at a great pace, he just got up to win by a head. The favourite, Sam Boy, never flattered.

Another fine finish was that for the Clounanna Bitch Stake, in which Hello H. just beat Fashionette by a length. The latter had all the worse of the luck. She was badly hemmed in and was well in the rear half-way round, but, showing great speed, she made up much ground, and in another couple of strides would, doubtless, have won.

That good dog Debonairly won the Clonmel Stakes in smart style from Mr. T. O'Brien's Odd Brandy; but the Cork courser was recompensed when the well supported Go Joke won the Shelbourne Hurdle in easy fashion.

Mr. Maxwell Arnott's Noble Grecian showed a return to his best form in winning the Celtic Hurdle, going round in most impressive style. The Sliberia came to the rescue of backers by winning the City Plate after a good race with Vesty. Details:—

BILLIARDS.

ANOTHER THOUSAND BY LINDRUM.

When play ceased overnight at the Catholic Commercial Club, Dublin, Lindrum led by 1,894. Newman was in fine form yesterday afternoon, and had his best session, so far. Opening with a capital all-round 466, which included 61 close cannons, he was soon in again with a run of 130 (39 close cannons), while three visits by Lindrum only produced 19. Newman had further breaks of 146 (35 close cannons) and 184 (53 close cannons). Lindrum's contributions being 38 and 90. A 98 and a good 316 (115 close cannons) brought Newman to 6,125, having wiped off over 800 of his arrears, but in the last half-hour of the session Lindrum gave a brilliant display, scoring at the rate of 25 per minute, to leave off with 801 unfinished. The averages of the session were—Lindrum 136, Newman 211, and the scores—Lindrum (in play), 7,989; Newman, 6,625.

There was a big attendance at the night session, when Lindrum carried his unfinished break to 875. Newman compiled 226 (53 close cannons), followed by 59. Then Lindrum gave his best display so far by putting together 1,006 in 35 minutes, his 67th thousand since coming to the British Isles. It included runs of 72, 66, 55 and 103 close cannons, and was loudly applauded, the Australian returning thanks.

Newman got in for runs of 95 and 222, and with each having short visits the session ended with Newman in play with 87 unfinished. Closing scores—Lindrum, 9,273; Newman (in play), 7,435.

WOMEN'S TOURNAMENT FINAL.

SMITH V. M'CONACHY.

Play reached a high standard during the early session, at Manchester yesterday. Smith increased his lead by scoring 884, against 612: the averages of the players being 176, and 122 in favour of Smith. The latter took an unfinished break to 464, and also made 75 and 579. McConachy's chief innings were 91 and 508. Interval scores — Smith (in play), 14,664; McConachy, 11,982.

BOXING.

THE IRISH TEAM FOR LONDON.

INCLUSION OF CUPPLES QUESTIONED.

It was only by a single vote at last night's meeting of the Standing Committee, I.A.B.A., that it was decided that Ireland should be represented at the A.B.A. Championships on April 9th at the Albert Hall, London.

During the past few days much correspondence has passed between the Irish and English amateur bodies regarding the right of Lance-Corporal Cupples to represent Ireland. The A.B.A. raised an objection on the grounds that Cupples should qualify through the Imperial Services' Boxing Association, being a British soldier. In reply to this intimation General Murphy replied that Cupples, who is an Irishman, was selected as the champion at his weight. Had he been selected on the I.S.B.A. team the objection could be understood, and a substitute found.

A long discussion took place, and the attitude of the A.B.A. was criticised. There were divergent views on minor points concerning the non-acceptance of the entry, but an unanimity of opinion regarding the rules of an Association which debars a champion of a country from representing that country.

The question of withdrawing the whole Irish team as a protest was put strongly to the meeting, and a proposal to do so was defeated by five votes to four.

It was decided to take Lance-Corporal Cupples with the team, and the Chairman remarked that in future, if satisfactory arrangements are not arrived at beforehand, no Irish team will be sent.

A general try-out for the Irish team takes place at the Depôt on Saturday at 3 o'clock.

It was announced that in a try-out at the Depôt P. Dunne (St. Andrew's) beat F. Wright (Phœnix), and will travel as the Irish representative in the place of Private Quinn, the champion, who is suffering from a septic hand.

The Liverpool team to meet the Irish Juveniles to-morrow will arrive in Dublin to-night. The full team is travelling, and several special bouts will be staged.

It was stated that it is likely an A.B.A. team will visit Dublin at the end of the month.

VON PORAT EASILY BEATS SNYDER.

ST. PAUL (MINN.), Wednesday.

Otto von Porat, who lost to Phil Scott on a foul in December last, defeated Angus Snyder here last night on points in a ten rounds contest.

Despite the fact that von Porat's right eye was partly closed by a right cross in the first round the Scandinavian had the better of matters all through the fight. He put Snyder down in the first round with a right uppercut and again in the third. The men's weights were:—Von Porat, 14st. 9lb.; Snyder, 13st. 10lb.

KID BERG FILLS A GAP.

NEW YORK, Wednesday.

The Madison Square Garden authorities last night arranged for Jack (Kid) Berg to fight a ten rounds contest with Joe Slick, the veteran Brooklyn light-weight, at Madison Square on Friday evening. This is an emergency contest by the Garden owing to the fact that Al Singer, who was to have met Ignacio Fernandez, the Philippino, has injured his hand, and will be unable to appear.

LEN SMITH'S SUCCESSES.

Tiger Len Smith, Birmingham, who was twice beaten on points in Dublin by G. Kelly, won two contests in the Feather-weight Tournament at the Stadium Club, London, last night, beating Harry Reynolds (Plymouth) and Joe Murrish (Birmingham). The latter had beaten Bill Barnham (Fulham) in the first round. Ginger Jones was not called on to fight, his opponent having been scratched.

ROWING.

OXFORD'S FULL-COURSE TRIAL.

BEST TIME THIS YEAR.

The Oxford crew returned the best time this year for the full course trial, from Putney to Mortlake, when yesterday they did the journey in 20 minutes dead. This improved upon the previous best time recorded by Cambridge last Friday by 30 seconds. Last Thursday Oxford took 20 minutes 40 seconds, and on March 22 they did the course in 21 minutes 8 seconds. The intermediate times in their trial to-day were: — Mile Post, 4 minutes 18 seconds; Hammersmith Bridge, 7 minutes 29 seconds; Chiswick Steps, 12 minutes 12 seconds; Barnes Bridge, 16 minutes 58 seconds. Finish, 20 minutes.

Throughout the trial Oxford had fairly good conditions, though they met rough water at Chiswick reach. Here they took advantage of the sheltered Surrey side, and even sacrificed the tide. They were paced by four scratch "eights," and the crews, starting at 35, rarely dropped below 30, and were at full pressure the whole way. In their early outing the Dark Blues paddled to Craven steps, and then rowed a minute at 18 and 35 strokes. They concluded their practice with paddling below Hammersmith Bridge.

CAMBRIDGE TRIAL TO-DAY.

Cambridge, after going to the Fulham Football Ground, turned, and went in easy stages to Wandsworth, rowing a minute at 35. The Light Blues later in the day rowed against a London R.C. eight. The Cantabs gained half a length at the end of 40 strokes, but the row finished abruptly, when, as the crews were shooting Hammersmith Bridge, the oars of the crews touched.

Cambridge will have a full course trial to-day.

CITY OF DERRY B.C.

At the annual general meeting of the City of Derry B.C., Mr. T. D. Ward, outgoing captain, presided over a representative attendance, which included a number of lady members. Mr. D. Blair, hon. secretary, submitted the sixty-ninth annual report, which stated that the club, from a rowing point of view, had not had a very successful season though an improvement on 1928. The club won four trophies—the Bann Challenge Cup (for Senior Fours) and the Magee Challenge Cup (for Junior Fours), and, at the home regatta, the Ladies' Cup (for Junior Fours) and the Tyrconnell Challenge Cup (for Senior Eights). An important matter, which the club would have to face if they wished to encourage entries from other clubs for the regatta, was the question of a more suitable stretch of water for the regatta course. He suggested the stretch of water between Carlisle Bridge and Newbuildings.

Mr. R. A. Wilson was re-elected commodore; Mr. T. D. Ward, captain; Mr. A. Donaldson, vice-captain; Mr. D. Blair, hon. secretary; Mr. Gilchrist, hon. treasurer. The following were elected on the committee, in addition to the captain, vice-captain, secretary, and treasurer:—Messrs. E. D. Kellock, Jack Shannon, R. B. W. Irwin, D. R. Keown, W. S. Irvine, James McKaig, C. Platt, J. Hill, J. S. Wilson and H. L. Hamilton.

The question of the appointment of a trainer for the ensuing year was referred to the new committee.

LAWN TENNIS.

ASHBROOK L.T.C.

The following officers and committee have been elected for 1930 season:—President, Miceal de Paor; Vice-Presidents, P. J. Mulvany and J. V. Bowden; Hon. Secretary, G. Mulvany, 21 Drury street; Hon. Treasurer, J. R. Howard; captain, J. Ryan. Committee—Messrs. J. Sheridan, H. Carey, J. Caulfield; Misses T. Christopher, D. Gill, D. Kearney, A. Kavanagh, G. and M. McCarthy.

Club grounds at Terenure will open for play on Saturday, Mary 3, at 3 o'clock.

THE AUSTRALIANS AT COLOMBO.

BRISK BATTING.

COLOMBO, Wednesday.

The Australian Test team, who arrived here to-day in the Orford, followed the custom of all Australian touring teams since 1884 by playing a one-day match against All-Ceylon. They were put in to bat by Dr. C. H. Gunasekara, the old Middlesex player, who captained Ceylon, and they delighted a crowd of 5,000 by some bright batting, during which they compiled the highest total ever made by an Australian team at Colombo—viz., 233. The top scorer was Ponsford, with 62, this being the highest score made by an Australian in these matches. Ceylon had scored 52 for one wicket, when rain brought the play to an end.

There was a hint of uncertainty about the wicket when Ponsford and McCabe went in, but these two batsmen made light of it by hitting up 30 runs in the first ten minutes and 50 runs in twenty minutes. At 51 McCabe, who had hit a six and two fours, was caught by Horan. Bradman tried to keep up the scoring pace by stepping out frequently, but he failed to get the ball away through a well-placed field. Ponsford scored two sixes in one over from Kelaart, and at the end of an hour 100 runs were on the board. Five minutes later Ponsford reached his 50, but when 62 he was finely caught by Van Geyzel off Kelaart. His hits included two sixes and five fours, mainly fine-on drives.

BRADMAN UNCERTAIN.

With two wickets down for 107, Woodfull joined Bradman, who, although timing his cuts well, was still very uncertain in his driving. It was this failing that finally proved his undoing, as in stepping back to force a ball away he broke his wicket, and was third out at 138. He took 65 minutes to make his 40 runs, which included three fours.

Richardson was finely caught in the deep at 154, and at the luncheon interval the score was 157 for four wickets, Woodfull being 28 not out.

Woodfull and A'Beckett put on 49 for the fifth wicket, Woodfull being out at 187 to a catch in the slips. He batted two hours and a quarter. The 200 was signalled in two hours sixteen minutes, but at 204 Kelaart bowled A'Beckett with a leg-break. Fairfax was seventh out at 213, and Wall and Hurwood left at 211 and 228 respectively. C. W. Walker, Oldfield's understudy, was bowled second ball by Kelaart, who finished with the fine figures of 6 for 65.

Ceylon went in, and at the tea interval their score was 30 for one wicket, T. Brindley being out to Fairfax. Albert and M. Gunasekara then remained together until the rain came, the match being abandoned as a draw. Score:—

ASSOCIATION.

EVERTON PLAYERS TO BE TRANSFERRED.

INTERNATIONALS INCLUDED.

Something like a sensation has been caused in English football circles by the announcement that the Everton Club, who are in grave danger of relegation, have intimated to League clubs that they are willing to receive offers for eight well-known players.

Two international players in Dunne, an inside right secured from Hibernians, who helped Scotland to rout England at Wembley two seasons ago, and Kennedy, the Irish left back, transferred from Arsenal, are included in the list. The other players are Weldon (inside forward), Attwood (centre forward), Kelly (right half), White (half-back), Lewis (left half-back), and French, a local centre forward.

It is stated that Tranmere Rovers are interested in Kennedy, and negotiations for his transfer are pending.

CROSS-CHANNEL TEAMS' VISITS TO FREE STATE.

At a meeting of the Council of the Free State Football Association last night a game between the Leinster League and the Waterford League was sanctioned. The Council also considered the playing of a game in Connaught.

Permission was given to the Free State League to play the Welsh League at Swansea on May 3rd. Sanction was also given to a match between Fordsons and Kilmarnock at Cork on April 27th, and one between Shelbourne and Derby County at Shelbourne Park on April 28th.

Consideration to matters connected with the Munster Football Association and Waterford Celtic was deferred.

Arrangements were made for the International with Belgium on May 11th, and the following members of Council were nominated to travel with the team:—Messrs. M. Murphy, T. J. Murray, J. J. Kenny, J. L. Brennan, J. Younger and J. A. Ryder (secretary).

HOLDERS BEATEN.

NATIONAL BANK ...... 3 ROYAL BANK 2

The defeat of the holders in the first semi-final of the Bankers' Cup came as a big surprise to a large crowd at Kimmage last evening. From a spectacular point of view the play was highly interesting, and at times reached a high standard. The factors that contributed to the success of National were the rearranging of the attack at the interval and the excellent work of A. P. Swaine. Comparatively, the losers had the larger share of the game, but they finished badly, Ritchie especially being at fault with direction on half a dozen occasions.

After a quarter of an hour's fast play Ritchie put the Royal in front with a great drive, but before the interval was reached Darling made the scores level with a splendidly judged push shot. Aylward, who had gone centre forward after change of ends, gave National the lead, and later, following a corner hit, Darling scored again. Royal played up strongly after this, and Ritchie reduced the arrears but in an exciting finish National retained their lead.

Royal Bank—H. J. Hilton; E. S. Phillips, G. H. Moore; T. G. Foley, F. G. Shellard, F. T. Twamley; W. R. Hewitt, J. S. Kerr, W. C. Ritchie, W. H. Kenny, H. D. Gobbe.

Umpires—Messrs. A. H. Cork and H. Bollard.

LEINSTER SCHOOLS XI.

The Schools' Committee met last evening and selected the following team to represent Leinster Schools against Ulster Schools, at Lisburn on Saturday, April 12th:—

Goal—A. D. Scott (Avoca School).

Forwards—D. Roberts (Mountjoy School), W. Pike (Drogheda Grammar School), J. A. MacDonogh (Avoca School), E. H. Crawford (Mountjoy School), W. Fry (Avoca School).

The team shows three changes from that defeated by Munster. A. O. Daish (Kingstown G.S.) displaces D. Sullivan (Mountjoy School) at left back, D. J. Coulson (Avoca School), who assisted the Leinster Juniors last Saturday, is again chosen at right half, while J. E. Murphy (Kingstown G.S.) has been dropped, his place being filled by N. O'Farrell (Drogheda Grammar School).

The team will travel by the 9.15 a.m. train from Amiens street on the 12th inst. Boys unable to play should notify immediately G. V. S. Ireland, 19 Mespil road, Dublin. (Telephone 61210.)

LEINSTER BRANCH I.H.U.

LAW REPORTS.

DUBLIN WOMAN'S WILL.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE HANNA.)

Mrs. Florence Emily Alexandra O'Farrell Stassen, of 81 Cabra road, Dublin, sought to have proved the last will, dated September 9, 1895, of Miss Elizabeth Sarah Yorke, otherwise Elizabeth Sarah Roberts, late of 3 Avondale road, off North Circular road, Dublin, who died on April 6, 1929.

The will was contested on the three usual Statutory grounds by Henry Yorke, of 2 Tivoli terrace, Harold's Cross, Dublin, who claimed to be the lawful nephew of the deceased woman. He further pleaded that if the deceased woman had duly executed the will, which he denied, she had revoked it.

Mr. Jellett, K.C., and Mr. Cyril A. Wilson (instructed by Messrs. Gerald Byrne and Co.), appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Sainsbury, for Mr. Marnan (instructed by Messrs. Findlater and Co.), appeared, by order of the Chief Justice, for the Committee of Miss Emily Henrietta Warren.

Mr. Herbert Hare (instructed by Mr. John P. Collins) said that he appeared on the record for the defendant, but he did not now appear for that gentleman. He merely attended in Court to explain that Mr. Yorke, of his own initiative, had approached the plaintiff's solicitor, and had written a letter stating that he withdrew the caveat, and did not wish to have anything more to do with the action.

Mr. Jellett, opening the case, said that the testatrix, who was forty-two years of age at the time when she made her will, left considerable personal estate. Having bequeathed a number of pecuniary legacies to relatives, she left the residue of her estate—£9,683 on deposit in the Bank of Ireland—to her daughter, Miss Warren, who was made residuary devisee and legatee. The will, it appeared, was drawn by the late Mr. Gerald Byrne, solicitor.

Evidence having been given in support of the will,

Mr. Justice Hanna said that he was fully satisfied that the will should be admitted to probate. He accordingly decreed probate, and allowed the plaintiff her costs out of the estate. The committee, he said, would receive their costs from the Court of the Chief Justice.

ARREARS OF SALARIES.

The hearing was resumed of the appeal by the plaintiffs in the consolidated cases of John Thistle and others, mental hospital attendants, against the County Councils of Monaghan and Cavan from the judgment of Mr. Justice Meredith and Mr. Justice O'Byrne, in the High Court, allowing the appeal brought on behalf of the defendants from a decision of Circuit Judge Devitt at the trial of the action in Monaghan on the 24th January, 1928, giving plaintiffs decrees for the sums claimed to be due to them for arrears of salary.

Mr. Geoghegan, K.C., and Mr. McGuckin (instructed by Mr. Joseph Gleeson) appeared for the appellants; and Mr. Martin Maguire, K.C.; Mr. Lavery, K.C., and Mr. McGonigal (instructed by Messrs. Lardner and Co.), for the respondents.

Replying to the arguments advanced against the appeal, Mr. Geoghegan dealt with the various points discussed by Mr. Maguire and Mr. Lavery on the subject, stating that he based his case in this appeal on the judgment of the Supreme Court in Gallagher's case. With respect to the analogous case of the British civil servants introduced by Mr. Maguire, he said that there was a wide berth between the position of a British civil servant and that of a hospital attendant. With regard to the questions of reduction of pay and dismissal, he submitted that an attendant going away under the powers of the Statutes could get his pension money, but going under the charge of misconduct or fraud he would get nothing. He could be dismissed only for fraud or misconduct, and there was no dismissal here. As there had been no dismissal, the assignment of salary continued, and under the provisions of the interpretation Act he submitted that the appellants were entitled to the relief claimed.

APPEAL AGAINST DISCOVERY ORDER.

In the case of the Munster and Leinster Bank, Ltd.—Patrick Joseph Burns and Joseph C. O'Farrell, plaintiffs, and Thomas Cullen, defendant—the plaintiffs appealed from an order made by Mr. Justice Johnston on the 26th ult. directing that, within ten days, they should make a further and better discovery, on oath, of the documents in their possession, power or procurement, relating to the matters in question in the action, the costs of the motion on both sides to be reserved pending the trial of the action.

The action was brought by the plaintiffs against the defendant. Thomas Cullen, victualler, 79 Morehampton road, Donnybrook, claiming possession of the dwelling-house, shop and premises, known as 81 Morehampton road, together with the yard and plot of ground at the rear, demised by an indenture of lease, dated 27th June, 1904, and made between Michael Cullen (since deceased), of the one part, and the plaintiff, Joseph C. O'Farrell, of the other part.

From the pleadings it appeared that the premises were demised to Joseph C. O'Farrell, with the adjoining premises mentioned, for a term of 155 years from 1st May, 1904, subject to a yearly rent of £46 10s., and the plaintiffs sought an order relieving them from any forfeiture of pleas incurred by non-payment of the rent, and an order directing the defendant to deliver up possession of the premises to the bank or their nominee.

The defendant, in his defence, submitted that it would be unjust and unequitable to relieve the plaintiffs from the forfeiture of the lease, except on the terms of their putting the premises into a proper state of repair in accordance with the covenants.

Mr. Poole (instructed by Messrs. Walsh and Co.) appeared for the plaintiffs and appellants; and Mr. Lavery, K.C., and Mr. Newett (instructed by Mr. Ernest E. Merrick) for the defendant and respondent.

The arguments having concluded, and counsel for the appellants and plaintiffs having withdrawn the plea that there was a valid assignment of the premises to Patrick Joseph Burns,

The Court allowed the appeal, the plaintiffs to pay the defendant's costs.

DALKEY URBAN COUNCIL.

LIGHTING OF THE TOWNSHIP.

At the meeting of the Dalkey Urban Council last night, Mr. J. Maguire, chairman, presiding, the Council confirmed an arrangement with the Electricity Supply Board to fit and light the township with 174 lamps of 200 watts each, and four of 100 watts each; 168 lamps to be on the present network, and 30 lamps to be fitted by agreement with the tramway company. The annual cost of the 168 lamps would be £516 12s. The lighting hours for the system would be from half an hour after sunset until 12.30 p.m. throughout the year.

On the motion of the chairman, seconded by Mr. Marley, the following resolution was unanimously adopted: "The Council desires to express to General O'Duffy the members' thanks for appointing Inspector Clarke to the position of superintendent of this division, and they are glad to see the appointment, on account of the splendid service of this officer and his great local knowledge."

The Chairman remarked that Superintendent Clarke had proved himself a most efficient officer.

JAPAN'S OVERSEA TRADE.

"The Osaka Asahi" and "The Tokyo Asahi" have issued a very attractive English supplement dealing with the oversea trade of present-day Japan. The publication contains 150 pages, elaborately illustrated, and valuable information is given regarding the development of Japan's overseas trade. In addition, there are many features of great interest to commercial people engaged in international trade.

DUBLIN CIRCUIT (CRIMINAL) COURT

AN ARMED ROBBERY.

CONVICT'S BROTHERS ACQUITTED.

(BEFORE JUDGE ROCHE.)

William Doyle and John Doyle, brothers, were indicted on a charge of having conspired to rob John Kenny, of Messrs. Kenny and Son, building contractors, at Donnycarney, County Dublin.

There was a second charge against William of being an accessory after the fact by aiding and abetting his brother in the concealment of a coat alleged to have been used in the robbery.

Mr. V. Rice, K.C., and Mr. Joseph Healy (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor) prosecuted.

IN CIVIC GUARD UNIFORM.

Mr. Healy told the jury that the robbery took place on Saturday, the 11th January last. Mr. John Kenny, who was driving along the Malahide road, was "held up" by a man in Civic Guard uniform and a man in civilian clothes. A revolver was produced, and Mr. Kenny and Mr. Sheehan, who was with him in the car, were forced to leave. The men then made off with a sum of £1,678 5s. 10d., which was in the car, being intended for payment of the wages of workers at Donnycarney.

The police became active, and a black waterproof coat, corresponding to that worn by one of the men in the "hold up," was found in the Phœnix Park. While searching the Park in the early morning detectives met a man, whom they arrested. The coat was later traced to the Doyles, through the instrumentality of the Leyland and Birmingham Rubber Company, at whose premises it had been purchased.

Counsel added that it was only fair to the accused men to say that at a previous trial the jury disagreed.

Mr. A. Sheehan, assistant to Mr. Kenny, gave evidence of the robbery, adding that at an identification parade some days afterwards he identified Archibald Doyle, a brother of the men in the dock, as the man who had worn Civic Guard uniform.

Mr. Kenny also gave evidence of the "hold up," and said that he identified John Doyle as the man in the uniform, and Archibald as the man in plain clothes.

Evidence was given of the arrest of Archibald Doyle, who was convicted of the robbery, and sentenced.

PURCHASE OF COAT.

Detective-Officer Scully deposed to finding a map of Dublin and its environs in Hanley's garage, where one of the accused men was employed.

Superintendent Ennis gave evidence as to the identification of William Doyle by Mr. Harrington, of the Leyland and Birmingham Rubber Company, as the man who took delivery of a coat.

Detective-Sergeant Lynch said that when questioned about the coat which he had bought, William Doyle said that it had been stolen from him on the day he bought it.

Evidence was also given as to the finding of various sums of money in the Doyles' house and the identification of the writing on the wrapper of a bundle of notes.

This closed the case for the prosecution, and Mr. Maguire asked for a direction against John Doyle.

INSUFFICIENT EVIDENCE.

Judge Roche held that there was not sufficient evidence to connect John Doyle of the conspiracy charge, and directed the jury to find him not guilty on that count.

The jury also found William Doyle not guilty, and both men were discharged.

DUBLIN CIRCUIT COURT.

ROUND TOWER CLUB'S LAST CHANCE.

(BEFORE JUDGE SHANNON.)

The case of the Round Tower Club, 27 Gardiner's place, Dublin, came up for judgment. It was an appeal from the order of District Justice Collins refusing to renew the club's certificate of registration on the complaint of Superintendent McGloin and Station-Sergeant Maher that there had been convictions against the club for permitting drunkenness on the premises and supplying drink after hours. It was also stated that men were frequently seen leaving the club premises under the influence of drink. A fine of £15 was imposed in reference to the drinking.

Since the case was before the Court about a fortnight ago some changes were made in the officials and servants of the club in accordance with the suggestion of the judge.

WIVES COMPLAIN.

The Rev. Father Flinn, S.J., said that his objection to the club was that men were frequently seen leaving the premises under the influence of drink. In his particular work he had constant complaints from wives and mothers with regard to this particular club. There was, he understood, a practice of electing associate members at a subscription of a shilling a quarter, the main consideration being that these people might be in a position to frequent the bar. The difficulty was that the poor wives were afraid to come forward and make their complaints.

He had learned also that the associates' tickets were lent to others in order that they might get drink after the public-houses were closed.

The judge said that if such clubs as this one were run properly they would be a social asset, and might keep men from resorting to worse practices.

Father Flinn said that he had no objection to a properly conducted club, but in this particular case he had had complaints from wives about their drunken husbands going home from this club at a late hour at night.

The Judge—That is why I suggested that the closing hour should be 12 o'clock instead of 1 or 2 o'clock.

Mr. T. A. Finlay (instructed by Messrs. Gerald Byrne and Co.), for the club—We have given that undertaking.

MIDNIGHT CLOSING.

The judge said that it was perfectly obvious that the Guards were justified in objecting to the renewal of the certificate. He would take care that the club henceforward should not have the chance of being described as a drinking club. If anyone were seen leaving the club after midnight, and if immoderate drinking were indulged in, then on conviction the certificate would be cancelled and the club would be abolished. The members of the club were indebted to Superintendent McGloin for the trouble he had taken in the case, and the lenient view to which he had given expression. He thanked Father Flinn for his assistance, but felt that the club should be given one more chance. He suggested that a notice should be hung up in the bar saying, "This is our last chance."

The application for renewal was granted.

Mr. Clark (State Solicitor's Office) appeared for the Guards.

LIFFEY POACHERS.

GUARDS COMMENDED BY CONSERVATORS.

The Dublin Conservators of Fisheries yesterday passed the following resolution:—

"That this Board desires to commend the helpful services rendered by Guards 92 D and 168 D in the detection, and subsequent conviction, in a serious offence against the Fishery Laws, in which the defendant was convicted and fined; and also commends the vigilance displayed by Inspector Beggs and Guards 180 D and 16 D in furtherance of the maintenance of the Fishery Laws."

Permission was given to the Brittas Club to net perch for the purpose of preservation of trout.

FAMILY MEMBERSHIP OF AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION.

The Irish office of the Automobile Association announces an important concession relating to membership of the Association. In future the near relatives of an existing member of the Association will, on nomination by that member, be admitted without payment of entrance fee. "Near relatives" are defined as mother, father, son, daughter, sister or brother.

At the Old Bailey, London, yesterday, Edward Morton Durrant (42), salesman, was found not guilty and discharged on a charge of murdering Julia Ivy Bardsley. The charge was the result of an alleged suicide pact. A further charge of attempted suicide against Durrant was not proceeded with.

DUBLIN DISTRICT COURT.

(BEFORE MR. COLLINS.)

The Revenue Commissioners prosecuted Michael Rackley, licensed bookmaker, Pearse street, for failing to enter bets on the official sheets on January 30th, February 5th, and February 11th last.

Mr. E. H. Burne, solicitor, for the defence, said that there was no doubt that on certain dates bets were not entered, but it was due to Mr. Rackley's being confined to bed. His clerk did not enter them up. The slips had been taken away by the Commissioners, and his client did not know what he had to pay on them.

Mr. J. C. Rudd, Revenue official, said that no bets were entered for eleven days prior to and including the 12th February.

The defendant, giving evidence, said that he had been carrying on business as a bookmaker for twenty-seven years. He was willing to pay all the duty owed.

Evidence was given by Mr. Briscoe, inspector, that the defendant was warned about entering up bets last July, when he was working on certified returns. He owed duty amounting to £6 16s. 0d.

Mr. Collins said that the case was not one for the Probation Act. He imposed a fine of £500, mitigated to £125.

WOMAN'S NINETEEN DOGS.

CHARWOMAN AS HER LEGAL REPRESENTATIVE.

A summons against Mrs. Rebecca O'Neill, Harrington street, concerning the keeping of dogs in her house, created no little amusement. Mr. Little, D.J., had made an order that of nineteen dogs, all mongrels, which were found by the police following complaints by neighbours, only four should be retained. It was alleged that the nineteen dogs were still on the premises, although it was stated on behalf of the defendant that homes had been found for some of the dogs. Only one summons, however, was taken out. The Guard in the case said that he had applied for nineteen, and the Justice advised him to see the office about the matter.

When the case was called a woman named Byrne came forward and said that she used to be Mrs. O'Neill's charwoman, and was legally representing her, as she was not able to attend.

Mr. Collins—Apparently this Court occupies a very high status. (Laughter.)

Mrs. Byrne then handed in a number of licences.

Mr. Collins (scanning the licences)—There are ten here, and there are three in the name of Caroline Aldridge. Who is Caroline?—She lives, I think, in the basement of the house.

Are the dogs not all Mrs. O'Neill's?—Caroline Aldridge, I think, owns three.

Mr. Collins—I see another licence here in the name of Mrs. Preston. Who is she?

Mrs. Byrne—She is a friend of Mrs. O'Neill.

Mr. Collins adjourned the case generally, saying that the Guard could bring it on again.

AN UNLICENSED OMNIBUS.

A fine of £130, mitigated to £44, was imposed on William F. McMahon for having in use, on the 19th January last, a 26-seater omnibus on which the Road Fund licence had not been paid. It was pointed out that since then the 'buses run by the defendant had been taken off the road.

MILK PROSECUTION.

A fine of £1 was imposed on Mary Doyle, dairy owner, Lower Clanbrassil street, for milking cows when wearing clothes which were unclean.

THROUGH SKYLIGHT.

(BEFORE MR. CUSSEN.)

Three youths, William Dooner (17), Philip Smith (15) and Peter Merriman (15), all of Bridgefoot street, Dublin, were charged with conspiring with three other persons not in custody and with breaking into St. Ann's Clothing Factory, Upper Abbey street, and stealing 50 suits value for £65 and 20 overcoats value for £22. They were also charged with having the property in their possession.

Detective Gordon read statements made by the youths in which they admitted breaking into the factory and taking the property. Dooner had been employed at the factory and had given some of the clothes to the other boys, but on other occasions they had all entered the premises by the skylight. Most of the suits had been pawned from time to time and the proceeds divided or spent on gambling and amusements.

When the charges were read over to them each of them said: "I did not get that much."

The witness asked for a remand until Friday, as he expected to make other arrests.

Mr. Cussen remanded Dooner to Mountjoy Prison, apart from adults, and the other boys to Summerhill.

Philip Smith's father asked if his son could have bail, but Mr. Cussen refused, with the remark: "You will be lucky if you are not in the dock yourself."

Subsequently Thomas Dooner (38) and his son John, of Bridgefoot street, were brought forward. John Dooner was charged with stealing a suit of clothes worth £2 10s. from the St. Ann's Clothing Factory, Upper Abbey street, where he was employed as a packer, and his father was charged with receiving it.

It was stated that when taken into custody John said that he took the suit from the factory and sold it to his father for £1 2s. 6d. The father said that he did not know where the suit was.

A remand until Friday, in custody, was ordered.

REPORTING TO WIFE.

CASUAL LABOURER CHARGED WITH ASSAULT.

Charged with having committed an aggravated assault on his wife, who had to be treated in hospital for an injury to her eye, a young man named Joseph Maher said that he was a casual labourer on the quays, and whenever he failed to get a job his wife made him go to the market to report himself to her. She kept him standing there for over an hour.

The Justice—You are no man not to be working. It is not fair of you to ask your wife to work to support herself and her two children while you are idle.

The accused man said that when working he earned 15s. a day and gave every halfpenny up to his wife and mother.

Mrs. Maher—When he works he gives me 5s. and the remainder to his mother.

A Guard stated that Maher was rather obstreperous in the station, and threatened to assault his wife again.

The accused man was remanded until Saturday.

ASSAULT ON CIVIC GUARD.

A man named Charles Rawson was charged with assaulting Guard 130 C and with resisting arrest by throwing himself on the ground and clinging to the railings in Shelbourne road. Other charges accused him of using obscene language and being guilty of disorderly conduct.

Mr. Cussen—Was he drunk?

The Guard—No.

The Defendant—I had a few drinks in. I was going home, and was suffering at the time great pain in my leg, having been in the Army and hurt my knee. The Guard was not in uniform, and I did not know him.

The Guard—He knew very well I was a policeman.

Mr. Cussen—Remanded in custody for a week.

DEMOBILISED AND DRUNK.

Charged with being drunk on Tuesday night, William Cannon, of no settled address, admitted the offence, and said that he had just been demobilised from the National Army at Templemore.

Mr. Cussen—You were a foolish man to be going round Dublin with £59 10s. in your possession. You must pay 5s. fine.

INFORMATIONS REFUSED.

Informations were refused in the case of R. Fitzgerald, a taxi-cab driver, who was accused of causing the death of Anna O'Hanlon, aged 78, by knocking her down at Mountjoy street on the 21st February last.

A boy named Cyril Wilson stated that the taxi-cab was travelling at a fair speed on the left side of the road when the woman, who was crossing the road, turned back and was knocked down by the mudguard.

MISSIONARY WORK IN INDIA.

THE NEED OF LARGER STAFFS.

There was a large attendance in the Bible Hall, 42 Dawson street, Dublin, yesterday afternoon for the annual meeting of the Bible Churchmen's Missionary meeting. Colonel Benson presided, and an account of the year's work was given by Admiral Sir H. Stileman, K.B.E., who spoke of the definite advances that had been made in the different fields of work—Persia, India and Burmah particularly.

The Rev. Harold Welch, who has just returned from India on furlough, said that he was glad to find everywhere evidences of strong interest and support for the work. In India, he said, there are five millions of Christians, counting all denominations and nationalities, and only four thousand working staff of missionaries to minister to their needs. In the Central Provinces there are three stations and four out stations, and medical work as well. In that district Dublin is represented by Miss Mecredy, and he said the city would soon be represented by some young man who would offer his services. In Mr. Welch's little jungle village fourteen thousand people had attended his dispensary, coming from distances of up to twenty miles.

The same speaker addressed a night meeting on the subject.

RUTLAND HIGH SCHOOL DRILL DISPLAY.

Rutland High School annual drill display and exhibition of country dances and games attracted a large gathering yesterday of the pupils, relations and friends. Swedish gymnastics and marching by the senior and junior drill classes opened the programme. The singing games included "I've come to hire a housemaid" and "Daffy, daffy dill O" by the juniors and "The mill wheel" and "Come, little partner," by the lower school. The seniors gave the sword dance and a country dance entitled "The Boatman." A Chinese dance, an Irish jig and a fairy dance were gracefully performed by the dancing class.

Among the musical items were a pianoforte solo by M. Pyper; "Bird songs at evening," by M. Cunningham, and a pianoforte duet by F. Johnston and V. Hodges.

At the conclusion of the performance Miss Stanton, headmistress, entertained the visitors to tea.

NOTES FOR INVESTORS

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
Wednesday.

It is really not surprising that some reaction has taken place in gilt-edged securities. For a time the upward movement was far too rapid, while, as previously stated, a good deal of the buying was speculative. The reaction, while partly due to profit-taking, was assisted by the unfavourable phase assumed by the monetary situation, and the acquisition of the bulk of this week's open market bar gold by Germany; further, the realised deficit for the financial year ended on March 31 provided a reminder that increased taxation may be necessary. Evidently, however, operators were most impressed by the unmistakable revival of speculation in Wall street, taking the view that if this develops it may lead to a transfer of funds from this side. Apparently, there is no prospect of credits being transferred from New York to London, whereas a little while ago the level of the exchange encouraged a hope that New York would send gold to this side. It seems likely that for the next week or two the market for British Government stocks will show no decided tendency; certainly a renewal of strength is scarcely to be expected this side of the Budget. There is, however, no reason to look for a reaction to the level of prices that obtained in the early part of the year.

The Business of Reinvestment.

Some fortunate investors purchased such stocks as 4 per Cent. Funding at a very much lower level than that now current, and, not unnaturally, they wonder whether they should sell and realise the handsome profit shown on paper. Broadly speaking, the step is scarcely to be recommended. If, for example, 4 per Cent. Funding was bought at 85, the return, without allowing for any accrued interest, is £4 17s. per cent. It is impossible to get that figure now on a British Government security of a long-dated character, and if anything else were bought in exchange, it would simply mean that the investor was taking a somewhat greater risk. He would be safe in exchanging into Home Railway prior charge stocks, an operation that would give him a bigger income, though the best in this group now yield rather less than 5 per cent. It may be suggested that a profitable exchange ultimately would be into English Corporation 3 or 3½ per Cent. stocks, now standing substantially below par, but repayable at that figure some years hence. In this case, the investor would ensure against capital loss: for the price of the securities must appreciate towards par with the approach of the redemption date. If the potential seller of 4 per Cent. Funding aims at a considerably higher return, such as is afforded by various Foreign Government Bonds, he certainly runs the risk of suffering some depreciation in capital value. In such times at the present it is not easy to pick out suitable securities in which to invest the proceeds of a sale.

Oversea Bank Shares.

The shares of British banks operating abroad give some good yields at current prices. Most of these institutions are strong, with reserves reaching or exceeding their paid-up capital. They are less safe investments, of course, than the shares of the leading English banks, such as the Big Five, because their dividends may vary with a change in economic conditions in the countries in which the business is conducted, as witness the reductions announced lately by the Bank of New South Wales and the Union Bank of Australia. All the Eastern exchange banks, the Chartered of India, the National and the Mercantile of India have maintained former dividends, and in these cases the returns available are quite good. Prices are much below the highest of 1929, owing to the nervousness engendered by the political situation in the dependency. Despite this there is no reason to expect that dividends will not be maintained in the future.

Ordinary Shares.

The prudent investor will only purchase Ordinary shares in companies that are financially strong, where, in short, there is every prospect of the maintenance of dividends. In such cases, however, he must be content with quite a moderate return upon his money, and in this matter of yields there are some striking differences due to the consideration mentioned. Among the great industrial undertakings whose finances are exceptionally strong may be included the British Aluminium Company, which recently issued its annual report. The £1 Ordinary shares are quoted at 2⅜, and even allowing for the balance dividend in the price, they yield barely 4 3/16 per cent. from the 10 per cent. dividend paid for the last few years. Such a return can only mean either that a higher rate is expected in the future, or that there will be some plum in the shape of a new issue of shares on bonus terms. In contrast with this yield, Odhams Press 4s. Ordinary shares may be instanced. These are quoted at about 6s. 9d., thus indicating a yield of over 10 per cent., while the new issue was made on a yield basis of over 11 per cent. Then there are Faquin Ordinary 10s. shares quoted at about 28s., and yielding over 11 per cent. from the 30 per cent. distribution lately announced.

A Share with Scope.

Finally, Harland and Wolff 6 per cent. First Pref. may be mentioned. The recent report of this company indicated a considerable improvement in the position, and these Preference shares have risen from last year's lowest of 9s. 0¾d. to 11s. 3d.; this means that they are still at a heavy discount, while allowing for accrued dividend, they yield over 11 per cent. The current price would appear to afford scope for capital appreciation; for at 15s. the return would still be 8 per cent. Between such shares, with their yield of from 10 to 11 per cent., and British Aluminium, with its yield of barely 4 3/16 per cent., there is a big field, the extent of which must be somewhat bewildering to many investors. In such cases it is not a bad thing to remember the old axiom—the greater the yield the greater the risk.

Rubber Shares.

The mild revival of interest lately shown in Rubber Shares is based on the reports indicating a nearly general acceptance of the plan for a tapping holiday in the month of May, it being reported that about 80 per cent. of the companies have fallen in with the arrangement. This will mean a substantial reduction in production for the current year, but it might be unwise to assume that it will mean much bigger profits for the companies. The broad position at present is that output is considerably in excess of the world's requirements, and that equilibrium is not likely to be established for a considerable time to come unless more progress is effected in extending the use of the commodity. There are many ways in which rubber could be much more freely used than it is at present, but, unfortunately, when experiments are contemplated, it is usually found that the manufacturing cost is prohibitive. The rubber itself is obtainable at an unusually low figure, but when it is asked for as a substitute for linoleum, for example, and for other purposes the prices asked are discouraging. In time, of course, much more rubber will be needed with the increase in the number of motor cars in the world, but for the present the position scarcely justifies a substantial improvement in Rubber Share prices. There is too narrow a margin between production costs and the price obtainable for the article to encourage the hope of good profits

Oils.

The improved tendency of Oil Shares noticeable this week is partly due to the revival of speculation in New York, but Paris has also given some support. In addition, sanguine expectations are current regarding forthcoming dividend announcements. It is rumoured, for instance, that the Burmah Company will raise its dividend by 5 per cent. to 25 per cent., while some of the more bullish operators talk of a possible 30 per cent. In view of the indications of still keener competition in the Eastern markets, it would probably be foolish to accept these estimates without reserve. Anglo-Persians have sympathised with the rise in Burmahs. Another company which is thought may pay a good dividend is the Anglo-Egyptian. For 1928 22½ per cent.,

TONE AND COMMENT.

DUBLIN IRREGULAR.

UNILEVER ISSUES UNDER BEST.

Again Budget considerations dominated prices in several directions on 'Change, with depression and discouragement among leading Industrial Manufacturing Shares likely to be affected by the necessity to raise large sums of money to pay the year's deficit between revenue and expenditure, and provide for the further expenditure reported as contemplated by the British Government for the current financial year. Free State Government Stocks held firm and Land Bonds advanced; but British Funds still tended to slacken. The further sharp rise in Bank of Ireland Stock was the feature in the Bank market There was quite a rush of sale pressure in Guinness Ord. Shares at steadily receding price, and at the close 101s. was the best bid. British and Irish Steam Pref. were firmer. Rails show a few light irregular changes. Dublin United Tram Ord. closed sellers at last price, but a further rise was established in the Pref. Shares. Clontarf Tramroad Shares were lower. Courtaulds were pressed for sale on renewed Budget talk, and Tobaccos for the same reason were also a dull market. Imperial Chemicals were lower. Margarine, now known as Unilever, issues opened good, and then lost most of the gain. Alex. Thom Ord. were lifted substantially, while the Pref. were ineffectually bid to 58s. 6d. to 60s., without securing a share. Alliance Gas Shares, E. and J. Burke Pref. and Leyland Motors were all scarce.

LONDON FIRMER.

RUBBERS AND OILS ACTIVE.

Although there was no material expansion in the volume of business passing in the London Stock Markets, as a whole yesterday, rather firmer conditions were apparent, while in one or two directions, particularly Rubber and Oil issues, the tone might be described as strong. Reports are current of a pending New Zealand Government Loan. The last issue was in September, 1929, and took the form of a conversion offer to holders of 4 per Cent. Loan, which fell due November 1, 1929. The amount was £5,000,000 in 5 per Cent. Stock, 1935-45. The balance of the maturing 4 per Cent. Loan was paid off in cash.

Irregular conditions ruled in the Gilt-edged section, and apart from the 3½ per Cent. Conversion Loan, which finished ¼ to the good, the few movements recorded were against holders. Foreign Government Stocks also attracted but scanty attention, but for the most part they remained as before. German Sevens, however, strengthened to 109, or a point harder. The further decrease in the traffic returns exercised a depressing influence on Home Rails, and the leaders lost the turn. Colonial and Foreign Rails remained quiet, and a shade easier here and there.

In the Industrial sections business was on rather wider lines, and a number of firm features were evident. General Electrics were an outstanding feature, a strong demand from America finding the market poorly supplied with shares, and at the close a sharp advance was scored.

DUBLIN BUSINESS DONE.

BRITISH FUNDS, GUINNESS AND COURTAULDS WEAK. TRAM PREFERENCE HIGHER. ALEX. THOM ISSUES VERY SCARCE. BANK STOCK STRONG.

Government National 5 p.c. Sterling repeated 101, ditto Second 5 p.c. 98 1/16 and Compensation 5 p.c. 97¾; but Land Bonds 4½ p.c. rose ¼ to 94¼.

In British Funds War Loan 5 p.c. were practically unaltered at 103, after being slightly easier; but Conversion 3½ p.c. fell 1/16 further to 78 1/16, India 3½ p.c. no less than 2½ to 63¼ and Irish Land 2¾ p.c. ¼ to 59.

Dublin Corporation 5 p.c. Inscribed (1950-70) repeated 97⅛ and Dublin Port and Docks 5 p.c. 95.

In Banks, Bank Stock rose 1½ to 318, but Nationals eased 3d. to 48s.

In Steam British and Irish Pref. rose 1½d. to 14s. 6d.

In Rails Great Southern Pref. rose ⅛ to 40⅛ x.d. and the Loop Line Guaranteed 1 1/16 to 53, while the Ord. repeated 17¼, after realising 17½ 3/16, and the Debs. 60½; but the Guaranteed fell ⅛ to 49⅛, and Great Northern Debs. repeated 65½.

In Trams Dublin United Pref. rose 2s. 6d. to 112s. 6d., and the 3½ p.c. "B" Debs. repeated 56½; but Clontarf and Hill of Howth shares fell 3s. 6d. to 54s.

Among Manufacturing shares, Coats were 1½d. lower at 66s., 65s. 10½d., while Courtaulds gave way 1s. to 52s. 7½d., 52s. Goulding Ord. rose 1s. to 78s. Imperial Chemicals eased 1½d. to 26s. 10½d., but the Deferred rose 3d. to 8s. 9d. Imperial Tobaccos gave way 4½d. to 95s. 1½d., 94s. 10½d. Unilever Ord., quoted for the first time as such, opened 1s. 6d. better at 74s., 74s. 3d., and then fell back to 72s. 9d., 2s. 10½d., 3s., and the ditto sub-shares, having opened 4s. 6d. higher at 74s., fell away to 73s. 9d., 2s. 9d., 3s., and the Pref. repeated 22s. 10½d.

In Trading, etc., J. C. Parkes Pref. rose 2d. to 10s. 3d. x.d., and Maguire and Gatchell Pref. repeated 60s. Alex. Thom Ord. rose 2s. 6d. to 22s., and up to 58s. 6d. was ineffectually bid for the Participating Pref. shares, compared with 55s. 6d., last business done level. The 4½ p.c. Debs. were again called 60 bid, with possibly sellers between 65 and 70.

tax free, was paid on the "B" Shares, and it is hoped that for 1929 this rate will be maintained. If so, the shares at the current price would yield over 8½ per cent. net. Last year the quotation touched 63s. 6d. The Trinidad Leaseholds is expected to maintain its dividend at 30 per cent., and at the present price of 3⅝ the indicated yield is 8½ per cent. There are prospects of appreciation in these shares in view of the extension of the refineries, while it is understood that the company will shorty issue the balance of its capital in order to acquire a property of the Venezuelan Consolidated Company.

INDUSTRIAL MARKET.

INTERNATIONAL ISSUES SUPPORTED.

GENERAL ELECTRIC SPURT.

Most of the interest in the Industrial market yesterday centred around the International favourites.

In response to Wall Street advices, Hydro-Electric went ahead to 53½ at one time, the final quote of 53 leaving them with a net gain of 2¼. International Holdings strengthened to 7. Radio Corporations gathered fresh strength, the price improving in the "street" dealings to 59¾, at which they finished 4¼ to the good on the day.

Cables and Wireless Stocks developed an easier trend, the Pref. receding to 97¾ and the "B" Ord. to 31½.

The "Record" leaders lost ground, H.M.V.'s reacting to 4 11/16, with Columbia Graphophones offered around 6.

The outstanding feature in the Electrical department was the sudden demand on New York account for General Electrics, which went ahead to the extent of 8s. 6d. to 57s. Associated Electrics were also revived, and gained 3s. at 31s. The Supply shares gave a rather mixed display.

Thornycrofts made the best showing among Engineering descriptions, the price advancing 1/16 to 3 1/16.

Moderate support was forthcoming from the provinces for Motor shares. Austin Ord. came in for renewed attention and rose 2s. 3d. to 23s. 3d., with Leylands in request at 63s. 3d. Fords, however, lost ⅛ to 3⅞.

Although a little support was given in places, Breweries generally presented a dull appearance. Bass Ord. receded to 63s. 9d., Ind Coope to 63s. 3d., Hoare Ord. to 64s. 3d., Distillers to 68s. 9d. and Watney Defd. to 56s. 9d. On the other hand, South African Breweries Ordinary hardened to 60s., City of London Deferred to 10s. 6d., and Breweries and Distillers of Vancouver to 6s. 3d. Guinness were offered at first around 101s. 6d., but rallied later to 102s. Little variation was witnessed among the Tobacco leaders.

A moderate demand for Aerated Bread was reflected in an improvement of 1s. 3d. at 19s. 6d. A good turnover in Liptons left them 4½d. better at 5s.

Unilevers opened firm at 3 11/16, but, although they changed hands in fairly large numbers, were eventually without variation at the overnight level of 3 11/16.

Rayons and Textiles proved undecided in their movements. Courtaulds remained moderately steady around 2⅝, and Snia Viscosa hardened further to 12s. 3d., but the Celanese issues were dull.

As far as Textiles were concerned, Sewing Cottons proved a better market at 40s., but Bleachers continued on the down grade at 21s. 3d., and Fine Spinners came on offer at 24s. 9d. Bradford Dyers, Calico Printers and Listers finished unaltered.

In the Banking section, Bank of Australasia hardened to 11⅞, and Barclays "B" gained a few pence to 57s. 9d. Conversely, Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking receded a point further to 116. Barclays "A" at 8 3/16, Midlands at 9, and Westminsters at 77s. 6d., were all a trifle lower on balance.

Among Insurance descriptions, North British and Mercantiles put on ¼ to 35¾ and Guardians ⅛ to 10⅝.

Cunards ruled firm in the Shipping group, and advanced 3d. to 24s. 3d. Furness Withys and P. and O. Def. were unaltered, while Royal Mail Ord. stock reacted to 26½.

Associated Portland Cement came in for renewed attention, and were lifted 1s. to 27s. 3d. Among Swedish issues, Kreuger and Toll recovered ¼ to 31¼, and Swedish Match hardened to 17½. Imperial Chemicals gave way 4½d. to 26s. 7½d., the Def being a trifle lower at 8s. 6d., while United Molasses moved in uncertain fashion, and left off 1/16 lower at 5 11/16. Dunlops sagged to 14s. 3d. London Brick attracted fresh attention, and moved up 1s. 9d. to 41s. 3d., and Metafilters added 1s. 6d to 9s. 6d.

RECENT ISSUE DEALINGS.

Dealings commenced in Ingersoll Pref. shares (10s. paid), a small business being put through round 9s. 9d. Central Electricity Board stock hardened to 1½ premium, and Tate and Lyle Debentures gained ⅛ to 2 premium Elsewhere, Olympia New Ords ruled active in the neighbourhood of 5s. 7½d., and the Pref. stiffened to 19s. 4½d.

OIL SHARES STRONG.

Strength continued to be displayed by the leading Oil shares yesterday, the buying of which was described as of an influential character, while increased attention was devoted to certain other descriptions included in the dividend-paying list. News received overnight from New York was again encouraging, higher prices being general for Oil shares in that centre on the preceding day, while satisfaction was expressed at the further decline in crude oil production in the United States. In the week ended March 29 the daily average was 2,514,000 barrels, a decrease of 22,000 barrels from that of the preceding week and 113,000 barrels below that of the corresponding period of 1929. At the close share values were marked substantially higher in many directions, while only a few trifling losses were sustained.

RUBBER SHARES STRONG.

The firm tone manifest in the Rubber Share market on Tuesday was again apparent yesterday, and, with a noticeable broadening of interest, quotations were pushed forward in no uncertain fashion, a further long list of appreciable advances being returned at the close. The commodity market remained quiet and featureless. Spot and April sold 7 7/16d. to 7⅝d. per lb., May 7½d. to 7 11/16d. per lb., and July to September 7¾d. to 7 13/16d. per lb.

RAYON MARKET.

BUYERS HOLDING OFF.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)
MANCHESTER, Wednesday.

A bigger volume of inquiry for art silk piece goods has been met with, but no real improvement in turnover has taken place. Buyers are keeping in close touch with prices, so as to be ready to operate when the Budget secret as to the future of the duties is disclosed. Meantime they are making purchases that will satisfy urgent requirements. Orders for all art silk dress goods, high-class printed fabrics, linings, and corset and casement cloths have been given out, but no bulk transactions have been reported. Business has been principally for the home trade and the Dominions.

India has bought a few substantial lines of dhooties and minor lots of low brocades and fancies, but there has been no general buying. China, South America and the Dutch East Indies have done a small miscellaneous trade.

The present restricted production of yarns, whether acetate or viscose, is not being cleared.

COMPANY MEETING.

MARCONI INTERNATIONAL MARINE COMMUNICATION.

A RECORD YEAR.

NOTABLE WIRELESS DEVELOPMENTS.

MR. KELLAWAY'S ADDRESS.

The thirtieth ordinary general meeting of the Marconi International Marine Communication Company, Ltd., was held yesterday at the Incorporated Accountants' Hall, Victoria Embankment, London, W.C.

The Right Hon. F. G. Kellaway, P.C., J.P. (chairman and managing director), who presided, said that the issued capital of the company remained at the same figure as in each year since 1919. Each of the associated companies was doing increasingly remunerative business, and was likely to continue to do so. The balance of the profit and loss account was £203,111, the highest figure ever earned by the company. The measures which the Board adopted when he became managing director five years ago for the improvement of the company's position were now beginning to show their full effect—a very heartening augury for the future.

In 1923 the profit was £35,000, and in 1924 £83,000. The changes in the administration of the company were made at the end of 1924, and progress since then had been steady and satisfactory. In 1925 the profit was £118,000, in 1926 £126,000, in 1927 £179,000, in 1928 £193,000, and in 1929 £203,000. These encouraging results had not been secured by increasing charges to the shipowners. On the contrary, taking the company's contracts as a whole, there had been a decrease in their charges. Ten years ago they were marketing a direction-finder which was 90 per cent. efficient, and capable of working on spark signals only, at a sale price of £300, or an annual rental of £85. To-day the direction-finders the company were supplying were capable of taking bearings from transmitters working not only on spark, but on interrupted continuous wave and continuous wave signals. The instrument was entirely efficient and was being sold at £180, as against £300, or rented at £45 per annum, as against £85 per annum. It was the company's settled policy to continue to give the shipowners every possible improvement which science and research could produce in their wireless equipment, with as substantial a reduction in charges as the circumstances justified.

These results, so satisfactory to the shareholders as they were to the company's clients, had been secured by the application of what he understood to be the essential principles of rationalisation in industry. These were the elimination of senseless competition, the concentration of production into the smallest number of profitable units, the ruthless scrapping of out-of-date machinery and equipment, and the removal of every form of waste or duplication in the management of the business. If only these simple and common-sense principles could be applied throughout the whole range of British industry, he saw no reason why they should not be just as beneficial as they had proved to be in the operations of the company, but there were many people talking about rationalisation who did not seem to have a clear idea of what the expression meant.

THE DIVIDEND.

The net amount available for distribution as a final dividend was £178,663, from which the directors recommended there should be appropriated an amount sufficient to raise the general reserve account from £158,013 to £200,000. They then recommended the payment of a final dividend for 1929 of 10 per cent., involving the distribution of £119,272, and leaving a carry-forward to the 1930 account of £17,404.

Passing to more general matters, the company had a very active life in 1929. There was a fair increase in the volume of business offering, and they had to face efficient competition. Technically, also, the year was full of interest. There was an increase during the year in the number of launches from British yards of vessels of 1,600 tons and over—those which came under the compulsory wireless law. This increase was reflected in the present accounts. By the end of 1929 the company held maintenance and rental contracts in respect of 2,758 British ships, a large proportion of which carried direction-finders and auto-alarm apparatus in addition to the main installations. The number of sea-going operators on the company's pay-roll at the same date was 3,136. An unusual volume of non-recurrent expenditure was necessary throughout 1929 to enable the company to maintain the technical lead in marine wireless apparatus which it had always held. The utility of the company's short-wave wireless equipment was clearly demonstrated by results achieved with sets of only 500 watts power, used by whalers in the Southern seas, which communicated nightly with Bergen, in Norway, and Portishead, in England, over a distance of more than 7,000 miles.

A year ago he had referred to the increase in the use of wireless on trawlers, where it was not a compulsory fitting. That increase had been well maintained during 1929, and had already been exceeded in the first three months of this year The trawler owner and the trawler skipper had at last realised that wireless was not only a safety device, but a remunerative investment. This opened up a new class of business.

SOUNDING DEVICES.

During 1929 the company created a new department, carrying the title, "Marine Electrical Equipments," to deal with such matters as band repeaters, automatic telephones, broadcast reception on board ship, and sounding devices. There were a number of sounding devices, or depth finders, at present on offer to shipowners, but this company believes that the principles of beam radiation could give the shipowner the most satisfactory and economical form of sounding device.

The research into this matter had been highly successful, and a number of patents had been taken out. Instead of slowing down the ship, and resorting to the primitive method of casting a lead that might, or might not, find bottom, and in the former case at the best give only an approximate measurement, this company's sounding device enabled the ship to continue on her course while with the pressure of a button the navigating officer could read every fifteen seconds on a readily visible indicator the exact depth of water in fathoms. This line of development opened up entirely new fields. Every ship, be she trawler or great liner, required a sounding device, or depth finder. Their design of depth finder, which was continuous, automatic and exact, was the best fitted of all to meet up-to-date needs in this particular field.

At the conference on safety of life at sea, held in April, 1929, a recommendation was made, and adopted, to the effect that the contracting Governments should encourage the development of the use of depth sounding apparatus. The principles underlying this company's design of the device were capable of other applications. During recent months there had been a number of items in the Press on the subject of marine wireless telephony. In this work their company had been a pioneer. They had already rental and sale contracts in respect of over 70 marine wireless telephone equipments.

In order, however, that no false idea might gain ground in respect of marine wireless telephony they should realise that at present the number of ships on which wireless telephony could be provided as a paying commercial proposition for long-distance communication was not very large, while as regarded short distance telephony for cross-Channel and Continental steamers, whalers and suchlike, they had had the market well tested for a number of years.

UNCANNY EFFICIENCY OF WIRELESS TELEPHONY.

The uncanny efficiency of the company's wireless telephony equipment for installation on ships had recently been demonstrated by the Marquis Marconi, who had installed one of these sets on his yacht "Elettra," and was able to speak from the yacht, which was lying off Genoa, to Australia, conversation being carried on, as the manager of the Australasian Wireless Company told the Press, "as clearly as a local telephone conversation."

While at the moment there was nothing clouding the outlook for 1930, the directors were inclined to make a cautious forecast. The amount of business so far secured this year was in advance of last year's, but there was a tendency to increase the number of ships laid up. Their undertaking was an international company, with interests in many countries. That was a safeguard as well as a disadvantage, for this fact compelled the directors' interest, not only in home politics and trade, but in those, for example, of Continental countries, of Japan, India and South America. Taking everything into account, however, and bearing in mind that the financial position of the company had never been stronger nor its potentialities more evident, the directors inclined to a feeling of restrained optimism for 1930.

He thought the shareholders would agree that the statements and reports that had been laid before them since 1925, showing progress year by year, and culminating in the record net profit of 1929, spoke well for the administration of the company's affairs, but he must insist that these happy results could not all have been achieved without the sincere goodwill of the company's clients. The company's relations with the Post Office and the Board of Trade were good, and they received from both departments all the help that could properly be given. Their relations with the Chamber of Shipping also continued to be most cordial.

He (the Chairman) had on several previous occasions presided over the meeting of the company owing to the absence of Senatore Marconi who was then their Chairman. That day he presided as Chairman and Managing Director. Early last year Senatore Marconi expressed his desire to be relieved of the responsibilities attaching to the chairmanship, and to give undivided attention to his technical work. He was accordingly appointed President, and the directors were good enough to appoint him (Mr. Kellaway) to succeed to the office. Since that change was made Senatore Marconi had been created a Marquis, and he was sure that the shareholders would all wish to join with him and his fellow directors in expressing their congratulations to their President on so signal and well-deserved an honour.

If they considered for a moment what wireless had done for "those who go down to the sea in ships" his description of their President as one of the outstanding benefactors of humanity would not be considered extravagant.

A QUESTION REGARDING AMERICAN COMPETITION.

In reply to a question, the Chairman said that he was aware that the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation of New York had recently established a subsidiary in this country called the "International Marine Radio Company," and he understood that representatives of that company had stated that it was their intention to enter the business of providing telephone services on British ships.

He did not know how far these statements were authorised by the I.T.T., but he did know that the I.T.T. some time ago bought the Western Electric Company, which was established in this country, and had changed its name to "Standard Telephones and Cables." Previous to this transfer the Western Electric Company had entered into agreements which debarred it from operating telephony or telegraphy on British ships, and he refused to believe that a great commercial organisation like the I.T.T. of New York would attempt to get round those agreements by the simple process of forming another company with another name.

Dealing with the acquisition by the I.T.T. of communications companies established abroad by British enterprise and financed by British capital, he stressed the serious effect of that on British export trade and employment.

The report and accounts were unanimously adopted.

THE MONEY MARKET.

LOANS EASIER.

As a result of Tuesday's large disbursements credit was in better supply yesterday, and borrowers usually were able to obtain accommodation over the night at 3½ down to 3 per cent. Old money was renewed at 2½ to 3 per cent. for a day and at 2½ per cent. for a week.

Bill rates were well maintained, fine three months' maturities being generally quoted at 2 7/16 to 2⅜ per cent. There was some Continental bidding for June bills, however, at 2 7/16 per cent. The new Treasuries were offered at 2¼ per cent.

In the absence of support silver declined 1/16d. further to 19⅝d. per oz. for spot and 19 9/16d. for forward delivery. Gold was quoted ½d. lower at 84s. 10d. per oz. fine, at which price a small consignment from West Africa was sold.

At the Bank £11,600 in bar gold was bought, making a net influx for the week £1,036,467.

Sterling on New York failed to maintain the previous day's recovery, and was finally quoted at a little over 4.86 15/32 as compared with 4.86 9/16 on Tuesday. The Canadian exchange also moved against London and finished at 4.86 9/16, a net fall on the day of ⅛c. In the Continental section pesetas improved to 38.71, while belgas closed at 34.87, as against 34.87¼. Francs were finally quoted at 124.29, as compared with 124.28. Swiss francs were ⅛c dearer at 25.12½, while Italian lire appreciated to 92.80½. In the Scandinavian section Swedish kroner weakened to 18.10⅛, and the Danish rate was ¼ ore lower at 18.16⅞, while the Norwegian exchange again closed without change. Among the South American exchanges Argentine dollars were substantially better, the final rate of 43 5/16 being higher than the previous day's finish by 3/32, while the milreis was fractionally dearer at 5 [illegible].

LONDON MINING MARKET QUIET.

KAFFIRS HOLD UP WELL.

The Mining Market yesterday could boast no outstanding features, though here and there a little public interest was observable. Despite the paucity of dealings, Kaffirs held up well, the few movements being favourable to holders. Rhodesians generally were undecided. In the early hours many of the favourites were harder, but inquiries fell off, and the excitement, if it may be so called, died down, quotations mostly finishing at about the overnight levels. Chartered were finally unaltered, but Tanks were again being quietly picked up, and, despite Paris sales, a further gain was shown at the close. South Rhodesian Base Metals were a firm spot. Among Diamonds, De Beers Def., in the absence of Paris support, receded. Jagersfontein and West African Diamonds were better. The publication of the tin statistics for the past month aroused a good deal of discussion, the general idea being that the decline in visible supplies is more artificial than real, and that the big deliveries to America do not necessarily mean a corresponding increase in the requirements of actual consumers. The metal price kept fairly steady, and left off 12s. 6d. up at £165 15s. per ton. The share market had a hesitating appearance, and although the volume of trading was small and there was very little real selling, quotations here and there were inclined to sag. There was not much doing in Coppers, and Rio Tinto lost a small fraction of the improvement scored on the preceding day. Elsewhere, Minerals Separation were a harder market, and Mining Trust responded to a modest inquiry; but Burma Corporation eased on a few realisations. Closing prices:—

Jonathan Hogg, the Right Hon. Andrew Jameson, Sir John Keane, Bart.; Thomas Shannon Martin, the Earl of Meath, Joseph Xavier Murphy, Sir Walter Richard Nugent, Bart.; Arthur Ronald Stansmore Nutting, William Claude Odlum, Henry Brodhurst Pollock.

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

FINANCE AND INDUSTRY.

We are informed that the reports which have appeared in the Press regarding the formation of a company to be known as the Bankers' Industrial Development Company are premature and, in some respects, incorrect. Negotiations are proceeding, and an official announcement will be made in due course.

CO-OPERATIVE WHOLESALE SOCIETY'S TRADE.

The sales of the Co-Operative Wholesale Society for the past half-year were £45,802,994, an increase of over £1,700,000 on the corresponding period. These made a total for the year of £89,288,125. A net surplus of £742,148 was arrived at after providing for all expenses of production and distribution, interest on capital, and depreciation of property, and a dividend of threepence in the pound on the purchases of society members will be recommended. A substantial additon is being made to the reserve fund, which now stands at £1,112,640. In the export business sales were £588,193, this being twice as much as in the corresponding half-year.

THE ENTRE RIOS DIVIDEND.

The Entre Rios Railway Co. repeats the interim dividend of 3 per cent. on the Ordinary stock. It does not follow, of course, that there will be no reduction in the balance distribution, but if the company pays 7 per cent., as before, the stock at the present price of about 79½ would yield 9 per cent. Still it is somewhat encouraging that the interim distribution has not been reduced. For the six months to December 29th there was an aggregate increase of £103,500, but this has since been replaced by a decrease of £106,000 from July 1st last to date.

DIVIDENDS AND REPORTS.

AUGUSTA TEA.—Directors regret profits do not permit of payment of dividend on Ord. shares.

ARGENTINE NORTH-EASTERN RAILWAY CO.—An interim dividend of 2½ per cent (actual), less tax, on the "C" Debentures and Debenture stock on account of the year ending 30th June, 1930.

INTERNATIONAL HOLDING.—A net income of $5,280,089 (£1,056,018) is recorded by the International Holding and Investment Company for the year 1929. The company, which was formed in Canada on 29th August, 1927, is interested in the electric light and power industry, and has considerable investments in rayon companies. For the period to 31st December, 1928, the net income amounted to $6,305,334 (£1,261,067). Income, comprising interest and dividends received in cash, totalled $1,760,579, as against $1,115,967, while dividends received in stock amounted to $6,266. Underwriting and other commissions yielded $41,569, as compared with $390,266. Profits on realisation of investments totalled $3,899,748 (£779,949), as against $5,610,108 (£1,122,021). The company had to provide $336,657 for dividend at 6 per cent. per annum on 2,000,000 "A" shares of frs.100 each of the Société Financière Internationale de La Soie Artificielle, paid in March, 1929, under its guarantee, and after meeting expenses the net income of $5,280,089 was arrived at.

JOHN V. HUTTON.—A final dividend at rate of 5 per cent. on Ord. shares of 5/- each, less tax, making 10 per cent. for year; a dividend of 10 per cent. on 680,000 Defd. shares of 1/- each, less tax; forward, £1,596.

KANDAPOLLA TEA CO.—A final dividend for 1929 of 15 per cent. (actual), less tax, making 2 per cent. for the year.

MONTE VIDEO WATERWORKS.—Final dividend at rate of 10 per cent. per annum on Ord. Shares, making 8 per cent. for year (as for 1928).

ORIENTAL RUBBER CO.—A dividend of 4 per cent. on the share capital for the year 1929, less tax.

PORT VALE STEAMSHIP.—Profit £2,662, after meeting bank and interest charges. This clears debit balance brought forward, and leaves £317 to carry forward.

PORTFIELD STEAMSHIP.—Profits amounted to £7,239, after meeting bank and interest charges, making with £8,247 brought forward £15,486 to carry forward.

PROVINCIAL INSURANCE.—Dividend on Ord shares at rate of 20 per cent. per annum, less tax; dividend on Pref. shares for year at rate of 10 per cent. per annum, less tax; £11,302 forward.

RIVER PLATE ELECTRICITY CO.—Dividend on Ordinary stock 10½ per cent. and capitalised bonus of 5 per cent. on fully-paid Ordinary shares. Forward, £5,648.

SONGEI RAMPAH RUBBER AND COCOANUT.—A dividend of 2½ per cent., less tax; forward, £11,498. (Last year 5 per cent.)

SALTS (SALTAIRE).—The directors of Salts (Saltaire), worsted spinners and manufacturers, regret that owing to the serious state of the worsted industry during the past year they are unable to recommend any payment on account of the dividend on the Seven per Cent. Cumulative Preference shares. The company's Preference capital totals £1,200,000 and dividend is in arrear since 1st April, 1926.

TYSPANE TEA.—A final dividend of 5 per cent. on Ord. shares, less tax, making 10 per cent. for year. (Against 12½ per cent. last year.)

AUSTRALIAN WOOL SALES.

At the wool sale held at Sydney yesterday 9,755 bales were offered, of which 9,505 were sold. Wool sold privately consisted of 582 bales. There was an average selection. Under keen general competition, the market closed equal to the best point of the series for all descriptions of merino wool, and cross-breds met with good demand at recent rates. Greasy merinos fetched up to 18½d., comebacks 11½d., and cross-breds 11½d. The next series will begin on April 28 and end on May 28. Nine thousand bales will be offered daily on four days a week.

At the wool sale held at Geelong yesterday 9,000 bales were offered. The clips were attractive, and the recent improved rates were fully maintained under keen general competition.

SIR T. BEECHAM'S APOLOGY.

£10 FINE REMITTED.

When Sir Alfred Tobin took his seat at the Westminster County Court yesterday, Mr. E. P. Sandlands, barrister-at-law, offered an apology on behalf of Sir Thomas Beecham, who on Tuesday failed to appear on a judgment summons for £16 19s. 6d., balance of account at the Palace Hotel, Limited, and was fined £10 and ordered to pay the debt forthwith or be committed for forty-two days.

Mr. Sandlands said that Sir Thomas Beecham was most concerned that there should be any suggestion that he was discourteous. When the report appeared in the Press, Sir Thomas was informed, and he remembered that he had the document in his pocket. He telephoned at once to his solicitor to attend in Court and join with counsel in apologising.

Judge Tobin said that Sir Thomas had done all he could in the way of apology. He would remit the fine on the understanding that the debt was paid.

Mr. Sandlands said that would be paid in five minutes.

IRISH SHORTHORN BREEDERS.

SHOW AND SALE AT ENNISCORTHY.

ENNISCORTHY, Wednesday.

The County Wexford Branch of the Irish Dairy Shorthorn Breeders' Society held its annual show and sale of pure-bred and dairy bulls, heifers, and pedigree large white pigs in the Show Grounds, Enniscorthy, to-day.

The entry in the bull classes totalled 75, of which about half a dozen were absent. There were a dozen heifers and half a dozen pedigree pigs.

There was a good attendance of buyers, and bidding was brisk. Mr. O'Gorman, auctioneer, New Ross, deputised successfully for Mr. George Warren, who is ill. The Hon. Secretary, Mr. H. L. Latta, Ballinakill, also was absent through illness. Much of the success of the event was due to the enterprise of Mr. Latta.

THE SHORTHORNS.

Shorthorns predominated, and in the opinion of the judge, Mr. R. K. Wright, Mageney, the animals shown were a moderate lot. In Class 3, for pure-bred shorthorn bulls, there were three good animals at the head of the list. Mr. John Sinnott, Coolroe, led with Coolroe Guilder, a roan, calved August, 1928. This animal also was the champion bull of the show, and sold at the top price of 40 guineas, Mr J. Sutton, Wheelagower, being the purchaser. The second prize went to Mr. W. Leacy, Castle Ellis, for his yearling, Red Victor.

In a class for pure-bred dairy shorthorn bulls first prize went to Captain A. D. Place, Rosemount, New Ross, for his red and white yearling, Vain Edward.

In the non-pedigree class for shorthorn bulls, Mr R. Scallan, Ballyvalloo House, Blackwater, got first place with Bonny Baron, and second prize went to Mr. R. A. Latta, Ballinakill, Ferns, for Dairy Count, a dark roan, calved April, 1929.

In a class for other than shorthorns, Mr. R. A. Dier, of Coolbawn, got first prize for his black A.A. bull, Coolbawn Rover, calved May, 1929, and second prize went to Mr. F. Leigh, Rosegarland, Wellington Bridge, for Elixir of Borleagh.

AN OUTSTANDING CLASS.

The non-pedigree shorthorn bull class was one of the outstanding classes of the sale for entry and quality of the exhibits. First prize went to Highland Flash, owned by Mrs. O'Gorman, Ballyhyland House, and second prize to Mr. Thomas Shannon, Newbawn, Wexford, for his Newbawn Shuttlecock.

In the heifer classes, the principal prizewinners were Mr. P. J. Roche, New Ross; Mr. R. A. Latta, Ballinakill; and Mr. Stephen O'Connor, Aughnagally House, Enniscorthy.

The prizes in the pig classes were shared by Mr. C. Coppen, Castleboro', and Lieutenant-Colonel Loftus Bryan, Borrmount Manor.

"I WISH I HAD BOUGHT MY FORDSON
SIX YEARS AGO..."

FEATURES OF NEW FORDSON TRACTOR

3-furrow ploughing, 4' 6" thresher now easily within the New Fordson's range.
Light weight, for power produced.
Mechanical knowledge or experience not required to operate the Fordson
Simple construction, and very accessible.
Paraffin—The Fordson operates efficiently on paraffin.
Extra parts—Each Fordson dealer carries complete stock of parts. Fordson facilities unequalled.

A farmer had been considering buying a Fordson tractor. Finally, at the earnest behest of his two sons, he bought a New Fordson last Autumn in time for stubble ploughing. "I wish I had bought my Fordson tractor six years ago." That was what he said when he saw how rapidly the work progressed and how much less per acre it cost.

Another farmer had always wanted a tractor, but he had a sandhill that he thought no tractor would work. The Fordson dealer demonstrated a New Fordson with extension rims. It cultivated the sandhill to perfection. The farmer bought it. This farmer's son did all of their own ploughing and earned more than £100 by ploughing for other people. This young man and the Fordson ploughed eight acres in one day.

A group of farmers noted for being particular about good farming recently gathered to watch a New Fordson at work on a neigbour's farm. "Better work, and four times more work," was the unanimous verdict of these careful farmers.

"One crop paid for my Fordson," was the pleasant experience of a farmer who had a crop of turnips to put in. He ploughed his land in the Autumn and it ran together like cement. He knew that if he disced this stubborn land it would run together again. His Fordson enabled him to work it in quickly, an acre at a time, and to get a bumper crop of turnips.

The New Fordson is making even better records than before it was redesigned, and more farmers are buying Fordson tractors this year than ever before. The new tractor has much more power — it now draws a three-furrow plough or runs a thresher and baler or handles other draw-bar or belt machines with ease. Yet, the original cost is just as low and the running cost per acre is lower than ever, fuel and oil consumption having been greatly diminished. The New Fordson is also still noted for its light weight in ratio to power.

Every dealer has a full stock of parts on his premises and the fixed price of replacement parts is still as exceptionally low as before.

Can the New Fordson cut costs for you as it is doing on so many other farms throughout Ireland? It is more than likely that it can, but let the dealer find out with you by demonstrating a New Fordson on your own farm under your conditions. There is no cost or obligation attached to the demonstration and if the tractor does not duplicate its success elsewhere on your farm, the dealer does not wish you to buy. The Fordson dealer is in business to deliver satisfaction. Ask him to-day for the trial at your convenience. Henry Ford & Son, Limited, Cork.

HATCHING.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Poultry Correspondent says:—

Though the greatest number of chickens from the heavy breeds have likely been already hatched, there is no reason why a continuance should not be made during this month, especially such breeds as Wyandottes and R. I. Reds, which quickly mature. Then eggs from the light non-sitting breeds, such as Leghorns, Anconas and Minorcas, can all be set this month. In addition, eggs from Runner ducks and geese may be set, and many think that April is not too early for hatching turkeys, though the chief month for these is May. On the whole, February and March have been favourable months for hatching, but if anyone has been hindered from hatching out a sufficient number of chickens up to the present there is no time now to be lost for next winter's laying.
